MELLON PUSHES DEBT PLAN; GETS NO SUNDAY EASE

Meets with French Finance Chiefs.

Pressure on Hoover

British and American banking groups exert pressure for Hoover debt recess inasmuch as they represent a billion dollars in German investments as well as a billion and a half in American factory interests in Germany. Details at page 4.

PARIS, June 28.—(AP)—There was no week-end holiday for Andrew W. Mellon, who opened his conference with French financial leaders in an effort to bring the French viewpoint into line with those of other nations of President Hoover's call for a war debt holiday.

Mr. Mellon and Ambassador Walter E. Edge talked with Pierre Flandin, minister of finance; Clement Moret, governor of the Bank of France, and the other financial powers whose word will be important in determining the final French position.

Discuss Finance.

The conversations so far have turned principally upon the financial aspects of Mr. Hoover's proposal. Today's conversations bore on that angle of the newly added problem and tomorrow the same issues will be discussed by the secretary of the treasury and Premier Laval.

The suggestion that the Young plan be suspended entirely for a year has been submitted minute examination of that plan and the Hague agreements which put it into operation. The possibility of interrupting its operation was not taken into consideration when the Hague conventions were drawn.

As Mr. Mellon is believed to have taken the position that the problem is purely a financial one and since the French negotiators have asked careful consideration of financial details, this aspect has played the most important rôle so far.

To Talk with Briand.

Tomorrow political considerations may be examined, for it is likely that Aristide Briand, the foreign minister, and other cabinet members will be with Premier Laval when he meets Mr. Mellon and Ambassador Edge again.

At the beginning of the conversations on Friday and Saturday the French spokesmen were inclined to give equal importance to the financial and political aspects, but as the discussions progressed the former appeared to have become increasingly important.

Significant of this turn is the fact that there was less interest today in the attitude of Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Curtius of Germany.

German Ambassador Calls.

Considerable emphasis was given yesterday to German reactions by the fact that Ambassador von Hoesch called on Premier Laval within a very few minutes after Mr. Mellon and Ambassador Edge had left the premier's office.

So far as the French public is concerned, the past week has been one of the most exciting politically since the signing of the Versailles treaty. President Hoover's announcement set the ball rolling and there followed a heated debate in the chamber of deputies on Friday and Saturday. Then came the beginning of the conversations with Mr. Mellon.

Three Issues Raised.

The French have raised three issues not mentioned in the President's proposal.

First, France wants aid extended to other needy nations of central Europe as well as to Germany; second, she wants to know what guarantees there are that the Young plan will continue after a year's moratorium when Germany will pay the money she owes for 1931 and 1932; third, she wants to know whether Germany will continue to pay interest on repara-

Miss Elizabeth Robinson, winner of the sprinting championship in the Olympic games at Amsterdam in 1928, was critically injured yesterday in an airplane crash at 156th street and Cicero avenue. Miss Robinson, who is 19 years old and lives in Riverdale, was in the front seat of a plane piloted by her cousin, Wilson Palmer, who also lives in Riverdale and who was also injured.

The girl athlete's mother witnessed the accident from the nearby flying field, from which the plane had just taken off. Palmer had piloted the machine to a height of 400 feet, according to witnesses, when the motor stalled. The plane capsized suddenly and shot to the ground, imbedding itself in the turf to a depth of several feet.

Rushed to Hospitals.

Miss Robinson was taken to the county infirmary at Oak Forest for emergency treatment. Physicians there said her left leg and left arm were fractured, her face and forehead were badly lacerated, and there was a possible skull fracture. Palmer was taken to the Ingalls Memorial hospital at Harvey, where it was said he had sustained several fractures and his condition was "quite serious."

Palmer, who is 18 years old and employed by the National Safety company, owners of airplanes, had just been granted a pilot's license yesterday. He owned a third interest in the plane, a Waco with an OX5 motor, his partners being Harold Brown, 15017 Main Street, Harvey, and Peter Adanski, whose address was not learned.

May Be Crippled.

Miss Robinson, whose injuries may prevent her from ever again competing in running or other athletic events, has been studying physical education at the Northwestern university with the view of becoming a gymnasium instructor. She was 16 years old at the time she became America's first Olympic champion in the women's track and field events, and she announced her intention of entering for the Olympic contests of 1932.

She won the 100 meter dash in 12 1-5 seconds, setting a new record one-fifth of a second better than the former record.

The year after she won the Olympic championship Miss Robinson entered Northwestern, where she has been under the personal tutelage of Coach Frank Hill. As Northwestern has no women's track team, Miss Robinson entered various events as a member of the Illinois Women's Athletic club. She is a member of the Kappa Gamma sorority and according to Coach Dick Hanley is an outstanding student, popular on the campus. She is commonly called Betty.

According to her sister, Mrs. Jean Rochfort, Betty had gone to the Illinois Women's Athletic club yesterday for her daily training for the 100 and 220 yard dashes in the national championships to be held July 25 and stopped at the flying field on her way home.

"Betty loved flying and did not know the meaning of fear," said Mrs. Rochfort. "I believe she has been up before with Palmer and she has often been up in other planes and has been interested in flying for the last two years."

CARRIED OVER FALLS IN BOAT CRIPPLED BY RIVAL GANGSTERS

Niagara Falls, N. Y., June 28.—[Special.]—An unidentified man was swept over the Canadian falls today when his crippled motor boat was caught in the swift current and carried into the rapids.

Persons on shore saw him trying to work his stalled motor and finally attempt to use oars as he was being carried into the rapids. He disappeared over the brink almost in the center of the horseshoe.

An oar was found later in the pool below the falls. It had been sawed almost in two. It is suspected that the man was a smuggler of liquor or of aliens and that rival gangsters had crippled the engine and sawed the oars to trap him to death.

"Ma" Kennedy, N.Y. Man Wed After Midnight

Longview, Wash., June 28.—(AP)—Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, evangelist mother of Aimee Semple McPherson, became Mrs. G. E. Hudson shortly after midnight this morning when she was married in an outdoor ceremony on the banks of Lake Sacajawea, in the heart of Longview. The Rev. J. G. Gay performed the ceremony.

MRS. MINNIE KENNEDY.

The wedding originally was set for 2 p. m. today, but was hastened when Mrs. Kennedy learned newspaper men had learned of her plans. A simple Angelus temple double ring ceremony was read. In it Mrs. Kennedy promised "to love, honor and serve" her husband, whose home is in New York City.

Those at Ceremony.

The marriage service was performed in the presence of the minister's wife, their young son, Ralph Gay, who was best man, and Mrs. Beatrice Oliver, former editor of the Angelus Temple Crusader, who stood with the bride.

After the ceremony the party left in "Ma's" automobile, which her husband drove. Their destination was unknown.

"She seemed very happy," the Rev. Mr. Gay said. "She made a very pretty picture in the moonlight with the lakeside shrubbery as a background."

Groom "About Fifty."

The minister said he knew very little about Hudson, but described him as an amiable, affable gentleman about 50 years old.

The Rev. Mr. Gay said that he understood Hudson intended to help "Ma" with her evangelistic work.

HARVEY TURNS UP, SO THEY QUIT HUNTING HIS BODY

For more than an hour yesterday afternoon life guards dragged the north end of Belmont harbor for the body of Harvey Swartz, 16 years old, 3602 North Seeley avenue.

Earlier, companions had reported the boy had disappeared. The group had been diving from the gasoline launch, Asprey, owned by Harvey's father, W. W. Swartz. Thousands of swimmers watched the harbor dragging. The sight kept many of them from entering the water.

Suddenly the dragging stopped, as some one shouted: "There he is!" It was Harvey, very much alive. He had deserted his companions for a while for a better diving spot, he said.

CERMAK TO ASK BOND ISSUES AT TAX AID PARLEY

Mayor Will Present Relief Program.

Mayor Cermak last night announced that he would have a definite program for the solution of the tax and financial problems of the local governments ready to submit at Gov. Emmerson's revenue conference at the Stevens hotel next Wednesday.

Two of the principal features of his plan, the mayor said, would be continued and more drastic cuts in expenditures by the tax spending agencies and the funding of their indebtedness by bond issues in order to reduce the heavy interest charges on tax anticipation warrants. The mayor said he believed these proposals should be adopted as the basis for any sound relief program.

May Call Extra Session.

Gov. Emmerson has invited to his conference forty-two prominent men of the state representing the interests most concerned with the tax and financial muddle. He has inferred that he will convene a special session of the legislature if a practical relief plan is agreed upon. A majority of those invited to the conference sent their acceptances yesterday.

Should the program of Mayor Cermak be approved, the legislature would be called into special session to adopt legislation authorizing the city to issue bonds to take up its tax warrants. Such legislation could be passed at Springfield, Mr. Cermak said, if the legislature and the public are convinced that it would solve the financial dilemma permanently.

"The first essential, however, is a reduction in the cost of government," Mayor Cermak declared. "Under no circumstances must taxes be increased. Expenditures must be curtailed. We are doing a great deal at the city hall to eliminate waste and extravagance and we are going to do more. The other tax spending bodies must follow suit, in particular the board of education, which has to redeem itself before the taxpayers."

Sees $5,000,000 Saving.

Close to $5,000,000 a year will be saved from the corporate fund appropriations this year as a result of pay roll and contract economies, Mayor Cermak said. As an example he pointed out that the house of correction had been paying $12 a 100 pounds for beef, but let a contract last week for $5 per 100 pounds. The cost per patient at the municipal tuberculosis sanitarium, he said, had been cut from $21 to $18 a week, and would be lowered to $15, with improved food service.

"We are going to make further savings in the building and boiler inspection departments," the mayor said. "Also we are going to cut down the pay roll in the building department, where the work has been reduced but the appropriation remained the same."

Opinions May Differ.

Although announcing their willingness to participate in the Emmerson conference, several other Chicagoans invited declined to say what their proposals would be. It was evident from the interests to be represented, however, that several divergent viewpoints will be presented.

Seven of those invited are officials of the state and local governments; 7 represent newspapers; 5, railroads; 4, real estate organizations; 4, business; 4, downstate interests; 3, banks; 3, public utilities; 3, labor; 1, agriculture; and 1 a civic organization.

WHEN A POLICE JUDGE RIDES, HE IS MERE AUTOIST

In the village of Crestwood, which lies on Cicero avenue at about 135th street, Police Magistrate William P. Kuntz holds court weekday mornings and assesses fines against motorists who violate the laws.

But on Sunday evenings Police Magistrate Kuntz is just another motorist. Especially is he just a motorist in the village of Dolton, some six miles east of Crestwood.

Last evening he was heading homeward with four of his children. In Dolton, according to several Doltonians, his automobile wobbled a bit. So Motorcycle Policeman Harold Koehnche of Dolton took Police Magistrate Kuntz of Crestwood to jail. To the jail was summoned Dr. Carl Thompson, who sniffed a little and pronounced the magisterial breath tainted with some alcoholic beverage.

A $200 bond was furnished on a charge of driving while intoxicated and Police Magistrate Kuntz will appear before Police Magistrate Charles Herdnick at 7 o'clock this evening to tell him all about it.

Flyers Start on 2,100 Mile Hop to Alaska

BULLETIN.

VLADIVOSTOK, June 29.—(Monday.)—(AP)—Wiley Post and Harold Gatty resumed their globe girdling dash at 6 p. m. today (5 a. m. Chicago daylight time), when they took off at Khabarovsk for Nome on a projected non-stop flight of 2,100 miles across the North Pacific.

KHABAROVSK, Siberia, June 29 [Monday].—(AP)—Wiley Post and Harold Gatty set the time of their takeoff for Nome, Alaska, at 5 p. m. today [4 a. m. Chicago daylight time], following a thorough examination of their plane and an inspection of weather reports.

The flyers said the plane was in perfect shape for the hazardous 2,100 mile flight, much of which will be over open water.

Late weather reports, they said, appeared favorable.

Post and Gatty were taking no chances. Nothing escaped their close observation. They examined the swift plane from propeller to rudder and from wing tip to wing tip.

Face Hazardous Hop.

The flight from here to Nome undoubtedly will be the most dangerous leg of their record shattering round the world race against time. Their route is over high mountains and much water. They will cross the Bering sea where sudden storms and enshrouding fogs are not uncommon. The rugged and sparsely settled Kamchatka peninsula also lies in their path.

The flyers were cheerful of their prospects, however. They slept long and soundly here—the first real rest they have had since leaving the United States.

Post and Gatty apparently had definitely abandoned the idea of breaking their flight at Petropaviovsk, on the southeastern tip of the Kamchatka peninsula. A stop at Petropavlovsk would have lengthened their journey by about 200 miles and they would have lost considerable time. Petropaviovsk would have been the jumping off point for Nome, across the Bering sea, had they halted there.

Flyers decide to Remain.

The flyers landed here at 2:30 p. m. yesterday [1:30 a. m. Chicago time Sunday], after a 350-mile flight from Blagovyeshchensk, Siberia, which they covered in four hours.

Their first intentions were to continue their round the world race against time as soon as their plane, the Winnie Mae, was refueled, but after the tanks were filled, an operation requiring more than two hours, they decided to remain here overnight.

The flyers were greeted by a large crowd of Russian men, women, and children when the Winnie Mae coasted down to the landing field.

Post and Gatty remained at the field until the Winnie Mae had been refueled and then went to a restaurant where they ate a substantial meal. Both retired early, leaving word that they be called before daybreak.

Thus far misfortune has struck the American aviators only once. Otherwise their swift flight has been attended by exceptional good luck.

Average Speed 150 Miles an Hour.

New York, June 28.—(AP)—Wiley Post and Harold Gatty have been skimming around the globe at an average speed of about 150 miles an hour. When they set their fleet monoplane down at Khabarovsk, Siberia, nearly five days had passed since they left Roosevelt field last Tuesday, but only 59 hours and 28 minutes had been spent in the air. The best available information from the United States navy hydrographic office at Washington gave the distance covered at 9,000 miles.

Stricken City Seeks Relief in Water.

Read 'Em and Sweat!

Official temperatures above 100 degrees were recorded yesterday in 16 cities, a number believed to constitute a record for the month of June. The list follows:

Huron, S. D.	108	Davenport, Ia.	102
Phoenix, Ariz.	108	Dubuque, Ia.	102
Bismarck, N. D.	104	Omaha, Neb.	102
Birmingham, Ala.	104	Sioux City, Ia.	102
Rapid City, S. D.	104	St. Louis, Mo.	102
Peoria, Ill.	102	Minneapolis, Minn.	102
Springfield, Ill.	102	Williston, N. D.	102
Charles City, Ia.	102	Miles City, Mont.	102

Eight other cities, including Chicago, recorded a maximum temperature of an even 100 degrees.

Chicago was a heat stricken city yesterday. The temperature attained a maximum of 100 degrees, an altitude never before officially recorded here in June and one seldom experienced even in July or August.

With the combination of a broiling sun and a sultry west wind that set the streets shimmering, eleven persons died of heat prostration in the metropolitan area. Five Chicagoans were drowned.

Although the oppressive weather is already of five days' duration, no immediate relief is in sight. The forecaster, C. A. Donnel, said last night he thought that today would certainly be as hot as yesterday was, and perhaps hotter.

Predicts Even Higher Today.

When Mr. Donnel released the forecast at 9:30 p. m., the mercury still hovered around 90 degrees, giving promise of a comfortless night. As for the morrow, the official bulletin merely announced "fair and continued warm," but the forecaster added a more ominous comment.

"From the slow decline this evening," said Mr. Donnel, "it seems not unlikely that the mercury will jump above 100 before the next sunset. What a record that would be!"

What a record, indeed. Examination of the weather bureau's books for the 60 years of its history disclosed that the highest point ever recorded previously in June was 98.6 degrees. That was on June 30, 1913. As for the current date—June 28—the highest previous mark had been 95, back in 1922.

100 at Two Places.

For the purpose of the official record, yesterday's maximum temperature will be marked as 98. That was the high point attained at the University of Chicago observatory on the broad green Midway, from whence the official readings have been taken in the last three years.

But thermometers equally standard at the federal building and the Chicago airport observatories both recorded 100 degrees, so Mr. Donnel conceded the preponderance of the higher mark.

Moreover, as he pointed out, prior to the opening of the university observatory, the federal building temperatures established the official records, which made the 100 degree reading more suitable for purposes of comparison.

5,000,000 Try to Keep Cool.

Under such conditions the matter of keeping cool became an acute problem, which the 5,000,000 inhabitants of the metropolitan area tried to solve in divers ways and with small success.

Some 850,000, it was estimated, flocked to the beaches in the scantiest raiment permissible, hoping there to catch a breath from the city's natural cooling system—Lake Michigan. But the wind held steady from the west or southwest.

Men, women and children were packed so closely on the beaches as to hide the sands at Oak street, Clarendon avenue, Rogers Park and Jackson park beaches. The throngs extended far into the water, packed so close that the submarine temperature of 62 degrees further out was elevated almost to tepidity by the warmth of human bodies.

Waiting Lines at Beaches.

At Jackson park beach the waiting line stretched three blocks long before the bath houses, and the congestion was equally great at the other bathing places. Despite the enormous crowds lifeguards kept the day's record clear of all except one drowning at the lake beaches, eight rescues being performed at Oak street beach alone.

Other motorists—about 250,000 according to police estimates—sought comfort in the shady groves of the forest preserves. But here also the congestion brought discomfort and the cars crept along at horse and buggy speeds, trailing in the reek of engine exhausts.

List Names of Victims.

Victims of heat prostration, including those dead up to midnight, were as follows:

ERNEST LOASE, 49 years old, 20A East 149th street, watchman in the Markham yards of the Illinois Central railroad. He died in the Illinois Central hospital.

FRED KOLAR, 50 years old, a laborer. Stricken in his front yard, he died at his home, 169 North Carpenter street.

MRS. ROSE OZINKIEWICZ, 78 years old, 8625 Manistee avenue. She collapsed and died at home.

JOSEPH STUNILSKI, 80 years old, 1128 Darrow avenue, Evanston. Collapsing at the home of a friend at 1206 Florence avenue, he died within a few minutes.

ERNEST WEMBLOOM, 47 years old. He died at his home, 1800 North La Claire avenue.

FELIX BYSETCKI, 45 years old, 4733 South Throop street, who collapsed Saturday night. He died in the county hospital.

JOSEPH DAYKUS, 26 years old, 4521 South Hermitage avenue. Collapsing Saturday while at work in the stockyards, he died yesterday in the county hospital.

WILLIAM TOBOEY, 55 years old, 1855 East 75th street. He died in the Illinois Central hospital.

MRS. MARY HENDERSON, 81 years old, 1052 West 87th street, who collapsed and died at home.

OTTO REFKE, 50 years old, 1427 Larrabee street. He died at home.

FRANCIS B. STONE, 49 years old, collapsed at his home, 5000 West Washington boulevard. He died within fifteen minutes.

The shock of plunging into the cold pool at Portage Park was held responsible for the death of Richard Czyzewski, 17 years old, 5926 Slocum street. His heart failed as he struck the water and other swimmers brought him out dead.

James Padillo, 33 years old, 9900 Green Bay avenue, was drowned while swimming in a clay pit at 99th street and Calumet park. Morris Levy, 39 years old, 4152 West 21st street, a store clerk, was drowned in the Fox river, nine miles north of Elgin.

Carl Samson, 28 years old, 346 North Hamlin avenue, was drowned at Diversey beach. Diving off a springboard, he failed to come up. Life guards dragged the bottom five hours before recovering his body at 11 p. m.

The fifth drowning victim was George Kempinski, 25 years old, 2032 North Hermitage avenue. Unable to swim, Kempinski jumped into the river at Webster avenue, apparently believing the water shallow, and sank. The body was recovered.

3 HOT WEATHER GUNMEN HOLD UP 2 GOLF COURSES

Three hot weather gunmen yesterday afternoon raided the clubhouses of two daily fee golf courses on the west side, terrorized more than thirty patrons who were resting from the arduous digging of divots in the broiling sun, and escaped with a total of $575.

The clubs were the Indian Head, on Joliet road due south of Western Springs, and the York, at 22d street and York road. The latter course is in Du Page county.

When the robbers arrived at their first stop, Indian Head, Manager Thomas J. Geary and five patrons were in the lobby. Thirty more golfers were in the locker room. Only those in the lobby were molested.

Manager Surrenders Funds.

From H. C. Banks, 1209 Sherwin avenue, the robbers took $27; from R. L. Valentine, 4940 West Monroe street, $13, and from S. A. Jost, 500 North Ashland avenue, La Grange, $12. Then they forced Geary to surrender $475 and a pistol and a shotgun. The other two men in the lobby were not robbed.

At the York club twenty-six weary golfers were lolling on the porches when the bandits arrived. One stayed in the car with the shotgun and the others entered. They ordered all those who were resting to stand up and march into the office, where they were lined up against a wall.

"Now," said one of the gunmen, "we don't want any trouble. It will only take us about two or three minutes to finish this stickup if you cooperate."

The golfers looked at his pistol and cooperated. The other robber then seized Edwin Bohan, the cashier, and shoved him over toward the counter with a command to open the cash drawer.

Choked a Little.

Bohan was slow and the bandit forgot his politeness long enough to choke him a little. So Bohan opened the cash drawer and the gunman scooped up about $50 and fled. His companion followed and they joined the man in the scrubby looking flivver in which they had arrived.

Earl Porter, manager of the York club, said the car had no license plates. He tried to follow the trio, but was soon distanced.

DRY AGENT JAILED FOR ASSAULTING 4 BLIND PIG PATRONS

Long Beach, L. I., June 28.—[Special.]—One federal prohibition agent is under arrest here on assault charges and similar accusations will be preferred as a result of an attack on four customers in Casey's restaurant here after a liquor raid last night.

The federal raiders, three in number, apparently had been drinking when the attack on the customers took place, according to Dr. George Reiss, city physician, who examined them.

Harold Hughes, a paper manufacturer, said to have been beaten severely by an agent named Cameron, was released in $1,000 bail by Magistrate J. Charles Zimmerman on charges of interfering with an officer and obstructing justice, preferred by the agent.

SLAYER SEIZED ON HIS COT IN COUNTY HOSPITAL

Wanted for the murder of a policeman in Nashville, Horace Woodruff, 26 years old, was taken from a sick bed in the county hospital last night and locked in a cell at the detective bureau.

At the detective bureau the prisoner agreed to waive extradition, and asked that he be returned to Nashville as quickly as possible. He admitted the killing.

MYSTERY OF FIRE ON BOAT SOLVED BY YOUTH, GIRLS

Tell of Cruise Preceding Fatal Explosion.

Capt. John O. Anderson of the central coast guard station received a report yesterday on the burning and sinking of the motor yacht Aloha a mile out in the lake off Edgewater Friday night. The report made it seem almost certain that Capt. John Mattson went down with his ship.

CAPT. JOHN O. ANDERSON.

W. J. Starhawk, 25 years old, 3260 Sheridan road, informed Capt. Anderson that he and two school teachers, Miss Russie Masters, 222 East Chestnut street, and Miss Estelle Wanek, whose address was not given, were on the yacht when an explosion occurred.

According to their belief, Capt. Mattson was killed by the explosion.

Tells of Explosion.

They were at anchor opposite the Edgewater Beach hotel, listening to the music coming to them from the hotel, Starhawk said. Preparing to return, Starhawk said he went forward to raise the anchor while Mattson went to the bridge to start the motor. While his back was turned to Mattson the explosion occurred, Starhawk said, and he was thrown overboard.

Climbing aboard again, he found the two girls cowering in the aft part of the boat. Starhawk said, and Capt. Mattson was nowhere in sight. He shoved off the life raft and with the two women paddled to shore.

On the way in they met James Nestor, Richard West and Arthur Hughes, pilots for the Rapid Water Transit company, who were hastening to the rescue of the ship, which was then burning rapidly. Starhawk said he called to them and said Capt. Mattson might still be on the burning boat.

One of Girls Is Burned.

Herbert R. Masters, sales manager of the Coe Manufacturing company, 201 North Wells street, a brother of Miss Masters, said she was slightly burned about both legs. Miss Wanek was uninjured, he stated. Starhawk, who has a boat of his own, invited the girls for a ride on the Aloha which, according to its owner, Harry Schechtel, vice president of the Krone-Sebek Diecasting company, was taken out without the owner's permission. The life raft had been borrowed without permission from a cruiser owned by Ben Horwitz, according to Capt. Anderson.

COUNCIL BODY TO DECIDE FATE OF MIVELAZ JOB

Members of the city council committee on efficiency, economy, and reorganization will have before them at their Wednesday meeting a proposal of the board of directors of the municipal tuberculosis sanitarium to effect an economy in the operation of the institution through the elimination of a "nonessential" job.

The position, that of director of social service and outdoor relief, pays a salary of $4,500 a year. It can be abolished, the board members stated in a communication to the council, without interfering with the service to patients.

The position has been held during the last twelve years by Mrs. Margaret Mivelaz, 1523 Lunt avenue. In one year, according to the resolution, the cost of the social service department was $10,716.

Two 200 Pound Cops Win Hot Footrace; Catch Thief

A Negro attempted to snatch the purse of Miss Ruth Hazelwood, 301 Drexel square, at 47th and Drexel boulevard last evening. She resisted and her cries attracted the attention of a police squad passing in a car. Sergeants J. J. McLaughlin and Constantine Czernikowski, pursued the purse snatcher for three blocks. Perspiring at every pore in the intense heat the policemen, each of whom weighs more than 200 pounds, captured the thief. He gave the name of Hill Davis, 19 years old, 4343 Calumet avenue.

SPAIN SUPPORTS REPUBLIC AT POLLS; 8 SLAIN

Socialists Obtain Largest Vote; Radicals Swamped

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, June 28.—Proud in their new experiment of ballots that worked miracles, such as the flight of the king, the Spaniards went to the polls today in a constituent election that marked the entry of the Spanish revolution into its second stage, that of political realities.

They stood in patient files to drop those telling ballots into urns where, for the second time in Spanish history, scrupulous honesty prevailed. Late tonight election committees still are perspiring over the complicated intricacies of the new electoral system, and returns are far from complete. Returns of election day casualties are also incomplete. So far the totals eight.

Reformists Fare Badly.

Of this much is evident. The Republican coalition has triumphed and has reason to believe that the vote is, if anything, toward the left, the Socialists having polled the largest vote thus far. The moderates of Alejandro Lerroux, the present foreign minister and called the "man of the future" come next. Then follow the other Republican groups. The extremists and wildcat republicans seem to have fared badly.

But what is very clear is the triumph of the regionalists' cause in Catalonia, the Basque country and Galicia.

In Catalonia old Col. Francisco Macia and his idea of resuscitating the ancient state of the counts of Barcelona, which went into decline over 300 years ago, swept the field. It looks as though he had captured 42 seats reserved for a majority out of 50 for Catalonia.

Riots Die at Madrid.

"After this election Madrid will no longer be our master," he shouted to a surging throng at Barcelona tonight.

Macia's white hair over a lean face that looks so astonishingly like Anatole France blew in the breeze which came up from the harbor down the street. The throng hopefully waited for him to proclaim anew the Catalan republic. What he did was merely reiterate their demands for self-determination within the Spanish state. There was no misconstruing his intent, even if he did not proclaim independence.

"We will go to Madrid to have our action approved," said Col. Macia. "And if parliament doesn't approve it, the Catalan people will say what is to be."

Nationalist Basques Victors.

In the Catholic north the nationalist Basques ran off with an unexpected victory. They carried four provinces, confining the socialists, headed by Indalecio Prieto, finance minister, to purely industrial towns. Their demands for statehood instead of limited autonomy now take on new significance.

Col. Macia proclaimed himself their ally and champion tonight, although his own political leanings are far to the left.

It is thought possible that the next few hours will see the proclamation of a Basque republic which, like that of Catalonia, will urge upon the Cortes a statute already in force to all intents and purposes. The Catholic party seems to have won a clean victory in Navarre.

Priest Beaten by Mob.

Although there are eight dead as a result of small riots in various parts of the country, quiet generally prevailed. In a suburb of Madrid a priest, urging the cause of Don Jaime, the Bourbon pretender, was accused of buying votes and was beaten.

In a suburb of Barcelona communists fired on a truckload of civil guards, killing the driver. The guards fired back, killing one Red. Street riots between Republicans and communists in Malaga resulted in one killed and several wounded. In Vergara, near San Sebastian, two were killed in a ruction with communists and one in the town of Carvalho Dalicia. Two other killings were reported.

The poll today was much larger than in the municipal elections that drove Alfonso from the throne, chiefly because the voting age this time is 25 instead of 23. Even the crippled and bedridden went to the polls. In Madrid the Catholic National Action party put automobiles, and even ambulances at the disposal of the helpless, and Socialist headquarters saw to it that taxi drivers conveyed crippled comrades to the polls.

In Barcelona alone 160,000 people voted. Col. Macia, it is estimated, will get as high as 110,000 votes. His rivals, sent against him by Madrid, have polled no more than 30,000 thus far. In many Catalan villages of 1,000 voters, the other two Catalan parties and Señor Lerroux together could not glean an even dozen votes.

BANKERS BRING PRESSURE TO AID GERMAN DEBTS

Bondholders Play a Big Part.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 28.—[Special.]—American, British and other banking interests with enormous investments at stake in Germany were moving heaven and earth today to put across President Hoover's debt moratorium proposal, designed to avert the financial collapse of the German reich.

W. R. CASTLE JR.

The trans-Atlantic telephone was working overtime with this wire-pulling across the sea.

While President Hoover rested over the week-end at his Rapidan camp within easy reach of a telephone, Ogden L. Mills, acting secretary of the treasury, worked all day in his office getting up material for the use of Mr. Mellon in his conferences with the French government officials this week. Mr. Mills had a telephone talk with Mr. Mellon during the day, and also with a member of the British government in London.

Situation Is Critical.

Acting Secretary of State William R. Castle Jr. was at the state department where he was joined by Mr. Mills for a survey of the situation, which is reaching a critical juncture. Mr. Castle professed himself still optimistic of the outcome. Mr. Mills was noncommittal.

Mr. Castle announced that the acceptance of the President's proposal by Poland and Czechoslovakia had been reported to the department during the day. Both these countries are allies of France.

Pressure emanating from the financial groups heavily interested in German governmental and industrial securities was being brought to bear, it was learned, upon both the German and the French governments to make mutual concessions which will assure an accord on the Hoover debt payment postponement plan.

It is not doubted that Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Curtius will accept the invitation of Premier Laval of France to a conference in Paris this week and indications are not wanting that the same financial influences are responsible in no small degree for the extension of the invitation.

According to Republican leaders who have discussed the matter with the President at length, it was Wall street and Lombard street that brought about the Hoover proposal of a debt moratorium.

Aggregate Over a Billion.

The bonds and other securities of the German national government, German municipalities and corporations held in the United States aggregate more than one billion dollars, while the branch factories in Germany of American industrial corporations are valued at an additional one and a half billions, making a total investment in Germany by American private capital of more than two and a half billions. The British investment is also a huge one.

For weeks the financiers in New York and London, particularly banks loaded with the German government bonds issued to "commercialize" Young plan annuities, were worrying over the impairment of the credit of the German reichsbank. If Germany should go to the wall they knew the safety of their investments in that country would be jeopardized. Some had visions of communism sweeping Germany in which event their investments would be as worthless as they are in soviet Russia.

Mellon and Hoover Differ.

Ever since the first appearance of a sign of trouble in Germany President Hoover, according to this version of the episode, had been strongly in favor of an all around suspension of payments in German reparations and allied war debts, but Secretary Mellon, despite his close relations with the great financial groups that were betraying anxiety, was against it.

The American finance minister was exceedingly unwilling to forego the receipt by the treasury next year of 246 millions of dollars on the war debts, of which 62 millions would go to reduction of the public debt and 184 millions could be used for current expenses.

Mr. Hoover discussed his project of a moratorium several times with Mr. Mellon but up to the time he departed for London to see his son graduated from Cambridge, the secretary had always succeeded in dissuading the President from embarking upon the plan. The upshot of the discussions at the time was Mr. Hoover's request that Mr. Mellon should survey the situation in Europe and then report whether he was still of his opinion that nothing should be done.

After two days of conferences with Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, Foreign Minister Arthur Henderson and Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, Mr. Mellon changed his mind and agreed that the establish ment of a moratorium was imperative if Germany were to be saved from financial collapse. When he reported this view to Mr. Hoover, the President lost no time in acting.

Attitude Taken by Paris.

In its note the French government said that it "emphasizes, in particular, that a formal assimilation has been established between the private debts of the reich [Young and Krueger loans and the unconditional annuities not yet mobilized."

France went on to argue that to suspend the payment by Germany of the unconditional annuities while permitting the public loan under the Young plan to continue to be serviced, "would go directly against a fundamental principle and express stipulations."

"The French government, therefore," the note sets forth, "considers that there is a moral interest of the first order in not postponing in any way the payment of the unconditional annuities even during the period contemplated by President Hoover."

System Is Complicated.

These portions of the French note have reference to complicated financial arrangements. A trust agreement between creditor governments and the Bank for International Settlements provides that the bank shall distribute pro rata among the holders of the Young plan bonds and the creditor governments entitled to the unconditional payments the monthly payments of one-twelfth of the unconditional annuities. This is a device for tying up the Young plan tightly to the rest of the financial situation.

As for the Young plan bonds they constitute a German 5½ per cent loan of 1930 to the amount of 300 million dollars. Of this amount 80 millions was floated in the American market and 120 millions in other foreign markets.

An additional 100 million dollars to make up the total of 300 million dollars went to the German government through capitalizing part of the unconditional reparations annuity. The trust agreement provides that the Bank of International Settlements shall not discriminate between the bondholders and the creditor governments.

Mellon Pushes War Debt Plan; Meets French in Sunday Talk

tions installments deferred by the proposed moratorium.

BERLIN-ROME PARLEY

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, June 28.—A German-Italian conference, the counterpart of the Anglo-German parley at Chequers, will take place within the next four weeks. Both governments want to straighten out all pending problems through direct negotiations.

Wilhelmstrasse declared today that the conference will most probably take place in Rome, but that the date is still unsettled.

Italian papers and official circles have expressed disappointment that Chancellor Heinrich Bruening failed to suggest a German-Italian conference in his radio broadcast last week in which he offered to collaborate with France. Diplomats immediately went to work to smooth out the difficulty, with the result that "the conference will take place as soon as it is possible to agree on a date."

One of the most important problems to be discussed with Rome is the delivery of coal to Italy. This is settled by a formal agreement according to which England and Germany deliver the most coal to Italy.

The aim of the German negotiations will be to divide the Italian market fairly with the British as the first step in an international agreement on the distribution of coal in Europe.

Invited to Come to Paris.

At the same time that the Italian official invitation to a conference was received, the German ambassador to Paris, Leopold von Hoesch, forwarded to his government a formal invitation to Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Curtius to come to Paris. The German officials will not go to Paris until Secretary of Treasury Andrew Mellon's negotiations on the Hoover moratorium plan are ended.

DEMAND REPEAL OF DRY LAW AT GERMAN OUTING

A demand for prohibition repeal was voiced and President Hoover was praised for his suggestion of a moratorium on war debts and reparations in a resolution adopted by several thousands members of the German-American Citizens league at their summer festival yesterday at Riverview park.

"Having shed their blood on numerous battlefields for the sake of America's political liberty, the German-Americans shall never acquiesce to the strangling of personal liberty of the American citizen as attempted by the present laws of intolerance," the resolution stated. "We deem the speedy repeal of all state and national prohibition laws, including the eighteenth amendment to the constitution, an outstanding political problem, and we shall put every candidate for public office under the obligation to exert his efforts toward the realization of this aim."

Attacking the treaty of Versailles and calling for the removal from Germany of the stigma of war guilt, the resolution commended President Hoover's debt proposal.

"We salute President Hoover's courageous stand," it stated, "in taking the initiative on the question of war debts as a sign of true statesmanship and as a generous contribution on America's part toward the solution of the world's economic crisis.

"We expect the national administration to use to the fullest America's power as a moral leader of the world in the interest of international fairness, justice and sanity, all violated and abandoned by the treaty of Versailles."

MELLON HAS BUSY DAY BEING FETED BY PARIS HOSTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, June 28.—So far as political persuasion was concerned today was largely a day of rest in the Hoover war debt moratorium negotiations, but not a day to be lost in nursing America's negotiator along, and so France gave Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon the works—socially.

It started at 12:30 when Pierre E. Flandin, French finance minister, entertained Mr. Mellon and Ambassador Walter E. Edge at luncheon at the ministry of finance. As Mellon, Edge, Flandin, Henri Berenger, former ambassador to the United States who negotiated the France-American debt agreement a few years ago, Claude Moret, governor of the Bank of France, and eight other of the highest powered French financial minds were about to sit down, M. Flandin suddenly exclaimed the French equivalent to "hold everything."

He had counted noses and found 13. No such cloud could be allowed to threaten the success of the gala day. Somebody jocularly suggested that the chef be brought in. M. Flandin hesitated a moment and then he brought in Mme. Flandin. Her presence put a damper on talking shop until she retired when coffee and liquors were served.

The high hatted, frock coated and spatted diplomats then rolled out to Longchamps to see the Grand Prix de Paris, always graced by the presence of the president of the republic.

BOY TRAPPED IN WELL RESCUED AFTER 23 HOURS

Dug Unhurt from Beneath Rocks of Cavern.

BY ROBERT WOOD.

Elburn, Ill., June 28.—[Special.]—Joe Howdy Smith came up from the bottom of his uncle's well this afternoon with a grin on his face and a wisecrack ready for the little band of rescuers, farmers, and relatives who since Saturday afternoon had dug away at ten tons of bowlders piled on top of the youth's head fifteen feet down in the well.

"What's the marra you guys," piped up the 17 year old as he was hauled up into the broiling sun by block and tackle and lifted toward a waiting ambulance by six stalwart farmers. "What's the marra you guys? D'you think somebody's gonna die or something? I can walk. Lookit——"

Cramped Limbs Fail Him.

He wiggled loose from his rescuers and made a feeble attempt at steady walking, but the young legs that had been pinioned between jagged rocks for a day and a night were not as willing as the spirit of the farmer lad, and he sank into the grass exhausted.

For 23 anxious hours "Howdy" Smith had been buried in the well, unable to move save for one free hand, while hundreds of farmer folk from the countryside around Wedron, a town seven miles northeast of here, dug in silence along the farm yard fence watching the hazardous work of clearing the pit.

Several times during the night and early this morning the rocks in the boy's prison shifted perilously.

Call Professional Rescuers.

The Smith boy descended into the well Saturday afternoon with his uncle, Frank Rabe. At 2:30 Rabe withdrew to fetch some tools needed in their repair work. His nephew, climbing after him, had released one of the huge bowlders which lined the well and the rest were jarred loose, falling in upon him.

Frantic rescue efforts were started by neighboring farmers, but their attempts to free the boy only further imperiled him. A crew of professional mine rescuers under A. L. Skelton of La Salle was summoned, a diagonal shaft was sunk, and at midnight last night a plank platform had been built over the boy's head to support the weight above.

The youth's safety was in doubt until he was finally pulled free of the last rocks which held him. For a full day he clung to a pipe in a crouched position with only his right hand free. With this he manipulated a garden hose through which he talked cheerily and at length with friends above.

Sings and Jokes Through Hose.

Through the tube he told the Wedron minister and the local Boy Scout master that their soft words of consolation were unnecessary, for he said: "I'm O. K.; I'll climb out myself."

His first complaint was heard early this morning when a large bowlder fell upon his neck and another pressed with greater force upon his shoulder. Then the rescuers decided to abandon their plan of rescuing him through their emergency shaft.

At daybreak the miners were sent away and a fresh crew began emptying the well of its rocks.

At 1:45 this afternoon Howdy was finally freed.

LADY MAY CAMBRIDGE.
[Acme Photo.]

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 28.—THE TRIBUNE is authoritatively informed that the report printed in various London newspapers today hinting that the engagement of Lady May Cambridge to "one of the royal princes" is to be announced shortly, is untrue.

Lady May is the daughter of the earl of Athlone, Queen Mary's brother, and Princess Alice, countess of Athlone, cousin of King George.

The published report is linked with the fact that the king and queen will next month give a dance at Buckingham palace, the first in seven years.

Albany, N. Y., June 28.—(AP)—Trapped on a railroad trestle by a train, a man dropped his son and two other small boys 50 feet to the waters of the Normanskill creek just before he was crushed under the train near here today. The boys drowned. The dead are Thomas Burgess, 45, his son, William, 7, and Russell Solomon, 8, and a 9 year old brother of Russell Solomon.

FARMERS SOUND BATTLE CALL FOR CO-OP ACT TODAY

Leaders Say They Will Smoke Out Foes.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Organizations representing half of nation's farmers cast battle challenge today to enemies of federal marketing act.

EDWARD O'NEAL, president of the American farm bureau federation, presiding.

Officials of the fourteen national farm organizations whose membership includes more than half the farmers of the United States have been called to a national conference here today. The meeting will be held at the Hotel Sherman with Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American farm bureau federation, presiding.

The conference was called by a committee of six national farm leaders who met in a preliminary conference here on May 18. A plan is to be presented for a united effort among all farm organizations to persuade the nation of the benefits of the federal farm marketing act to farmers and to the general public.

Following last week's announcement that a federation of business men had been formed in Chicago to oppose further inroads of governmental activity in business, and to "get the government out of business," today's gathering is credited with drawing definite battle lines for a war over the federal farm board's activities in promoting coöperative marketing of farm products.

"The conference aims to determine what groups are opposing the marketing act," said Mr. O'Neal. "We propose to make public the affiliations of these opposing groups or individuals and to reveal their motives. We have taken up the cudgels in support of the national policy on agriculture as it is now defined by law."

The organizations to be represented include the Farm Bureau federation, the National Grange, the National Farmers' Educational and Coöperative union, and the various national commodity marketing associations.

(Eugenia Bankhead.)

San Diego, Cal., June 28.—(AP)—Eugenia Bankhead, sister of Tallulah Bankhead, screen actress, and daughter of Congressman William B. Bankhead of Alabama, became the bride of Ennis Smith, New York business man, last night. It was her fifth marriage.

The ceremony was performed at Rosarita Beach, Mex.

The bride gave her age as 30 and the groom as 33. They said they would live in New York City.

DENMARK HONORS ATLANTIC FLYERS; TO JUTLAND NEXT

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, June 28.—(AP)—Otto Hilli gand Helger Hoirlis, who last week flew across the Atlantic to Copenhagen by way of Germany, today continued to receive the acclaim of Denmark, native land of Hoirlis.

The flyers have become extremely popular among the people of Copenhagen, and elaborate functions have been held in their honor. These will be climaxed Wednesday, when King Christian X. has commanded them to dinner at his summer residence at Marselisborg.

Last night the visitors were guests of honor at a gala banquet at the town hall, where they were greeted by clashes of lures, long curved war trumpets used by the Vikings, the highest honor accorded visitors to Copenhagen. Members of the cabinet and other high dignitaries received them while a throng in the festive hall cheered wildly.

At the famous Tivoli garden a special fireworks display was held, ending with the flyers' names emblazoned against the sky in letters of fire.

Later this week the aviators plan to fly to Jutland to visit the birthplace of Hoirlis.

FIND MACHINE GUNNER'S CAR IN O'DONNELL RAID

A stolen automobile, supposedly used in the attempted assassination of Edward [Spike] O'Donnell early Friday morning, was found last night at 31st street and Marshfield avenue.

On the floor of the machine were fifty empty cartridges of .45 caliber, such as are used in submachine guns. The machine was stolen late Thursday night from 63d and Wallace streets. It was found by the owner, Henry Micks, 5526 South Laflin street.

The attempted killing of O'Donnell, south side beer boss, consisted of riddling his home at 3145 South Honore street with bullets. O'Donnell escaped in an automobile driven by a policeman. Immediately afterward a police squad chased an automobile, and in the exchange of shots, Officer John O'Connor was struck in the shoulder.

? are we Scraping Bottom

Up to now we've all been conserving our money. We've spent as little as possible because the dollar we DIDN'T spend would be worth a dollar and a quarter or a dollar and a half later on. In military parlance, we've been living and spending on half rations.

As long as commodity prices kept going down, it was smart to hold off buying, because the longer we waited, the more we received for our money.

But every down-swing finally hits a dead center bottom. When it does, it hovers and then continues into an upswing. As soon as the pendulum starts to swing upward, there's a rush. A nation of bottom-price buyers suddenly realizes that there is no time to lose. Bottom has been reached. They realize the worst is over and all nameless fears vanish. And the sudden truth dawns that it is now as necessary to SPEND money in order to get the most for it as it was before to SAVE it!

Well then, are we scraping bottom?

We can't speak for other industries because we're not in them, but we can speak for men's clothes. That's our business exclusively; we've been in it for 67 years, long enough to have gone through eight major depressions, long enough to know when the bottom is being scraped.

The UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE statistics prove our point. In 1910, the price for fine staple, scoured territory wool was 67 cents a pound. By 1918, it rose to $1.84—a "peak price." In 1921, a panic year, it dropped to 85 cents, but in 1922 it jumped back to $1.25. It didn't stay at the bottom price for very long. In March of this year the price reached a new low of 66 cents, less than the low of 1921, actually less than the price in 1910—thus establishing the lowest price-level for a period of twenty-one years (fine Australian wool follows the same price trend.)

We own our woolens at the lowest prices since 1910, quality for quality. Our overhead is at its lowest point since 1910; even our rents are lower.

And so are Jerrems' prices!

There isn't any doubt about it—we're scraping the honest-to-goodness bottom. But it won't be for long. History has a way of repeating itself and prices will soon be on the up and up again.

Four hundred years ago Shakespeare said, "There is a tide in the affairs of men, which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune."

To which we should like to add our own paraphrase:

DON'T MISS THE BOAT.

UNDERNEATH ALL OF NEW YORK IS MORE NEW YORK

Miniature City Thrives Underground.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 28.—[Special.]—The real "underworld" of New York City presents a maze that no one man has ever explored. There are 132 pedestrian tunnels and subterranean passageways in daily use in the five boroughs, according to the city records and probably half as many again of which the city has no official knowledge. A tour of exploration, the help of several "old citizens" and the thumbing of yellowing files each contributed to today's story of the "ancatacomba" of New York.

There is a treat in store for the archeologists of the dim future, but right now most of the underground passageways serve a ulitarian purpose. The subways are not the only tunnels under this town.

Underground City in Itself.

There are caves and gigantic vaults and underground roads for New York's human moles to live, work and play in. It is possible to spend a day shopping and never emerge above ground. One can live at one end of Manhattan island and work at the other and never come up for air.

The 132 listed tunnels in this town include most of the underground short cuts from subway and railroad terminals to stores and hotels, but not all of them have found their way into the records.

One can step into an elevator in the St. George hotel in Brooklyn and emerge on a subway platform. From there the trains connect with three underground passageways to the basements of as many Brooklyn department stores. The same subway will speed one under the East river where the shopper can get off beneath the Woolworth building in Manhattan, walk through a tunnel to a bank, return to a restaurant, enter still another tunnel leading to another subway system which transports one to a tunnel leading to Wanamaker's department store. Coming out of Wanamaker's basement there is a tunnel leading to a third subway line which goes into Grand Central terminal. A regular maze of pedestrian tunnels branch out from Grand Central. It is possible to stroll underground to the Commodore, Biltmore, Roosevelt hotels, or into the Graybar and half a dozen other office buildings.

Can Take the Shuttle.

After lunching and strolling through the hotels, the underground explorer may take the shuttle to Times Square subway station where old tunnels and new tunnels and tunnels in the process of being born confront one at every exit. It is possible to cross crowded Broadway and Seventh avenue, and when the new subway is opened in the fall it will be possible to cross Eighth avenue as well. There will be a complete beneath the surface shopping center between Seventh and Eighth avenues. Even now the underground explorer can quench a thirst, buy theater tickets, look into sub-basement shop windows or walk to several big buildings and never see daylight.

Still beneath the surface, the explorer's next stop is Pennsylvania station. Here the subway connects with all parts of the huge railway terminal, foot tunnels lead to the Hotel New Yorker on 8th avenue, the Pennsylvania hotel on 7th avenue, and a path is being cut to the Governor Clinton hotel. At this point the explorer finds one of the longest pedestrian passageways in Manhattan. It leads from 7th avenue across Broadway and connects with Gimbel's store, the Hudson tube trains, and emerges at the McAlpine hotel.

May Spend Whole Day Underground.

Here one may take a west side subway train, a Hudson tube to New Jersey, the Pennsylvania to the west or to Long Island, or the Brooklyn-Manhattan subway trains to points north and south. It is easily possible to pass a day riding and walking about beneath the city.

A brewer built the first authorized tunnel in Manhattan under 93d street in 1877. Previously many tunnels had been dug, but city authorities had not been consulted. Thousands of kegs of honest beer rumbled through the brewer's tunnel, but now it is abandoned. There is an interesting old tunnel in the Yorkville district connecting two hospitals. Then there is the loop tunnel constructed in Brooklyn in 1905. It never was completed although the shaft is still open beneath two busy thoroughfares.

Street Tries Underground Ways.

New York even has a "tunnel street." The street was cut through a mountain of rock at 191st street and Broadway to afford residents of that section easy access to a subway station.

There is a great cave warehouse under old Avenue A. Deep beneath the surface the cave extends 100 feet in width for more than a city block in Sutton place south. Its entrance is through an old factory building. In 1874 a firm of brewers, proud of their product, desired to sink their vats deep in the cool rockbeds. The gigantic cave was blasted out after a series of interlinked caves had been dug. The cave is about 25 feet beneath the surface, has been abandoned for many years, and is not safe to wander about in. Some of its "rooms" have been filled in.

Park avenue, Broadway, Seventh avenue and now Eighth avenue are just covered over tunnels. Every new skyscraper has its private system of foot tunnels and Manhattan is rapidly becoming an island of human moles.

TAXES LOST BY DRY LAW WOULD END U. S. DEFICIT

Estimate Omits Former Dry States.

Washington, D. C., June 28.—[Special.]—If prohibition were repealed the federal government tomorrow the additional revenue from the eighteenth amendment would not be enough to balance the existing treasury deficit, according to figures made public today by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

The association estimates that the wine tax would yield the government nearly $906,402,224, compared with the government deficit which last year stood at $868,243,200.

In the course of a discussion of public debt and taxation problems Representative James M. Beck [Rep., Pa.] asserted that at least 500 millions in new tax revenue could be raised if the repeal of the 18th amendment likewise would legalize light wines and beer "not normally intoxicating."

Bootleggers Get It Now.

"It would thus," he said, "easily yield by an excise tax at least 600 million dollars, now largely paid to bootleggers. The administration would offset this by making this small and reasonable concession to the opponents of national prohibition, for while it would not wholly solve this great question it would mitigate the deep resentment which millions of self-respecting Republicans, men and women, feel in seeing the Republican party committed to a policy of fanatical prohibition.

"While the anxieties of the present depression have temporarily obscured this vital issue, yet the administration cannot ignore the undoubted fact that millions of Republicans are not in sympathy with a policy which sacrifices a half billion in revenue for the benefit of the bootleggers, produces widespread corruption and hypocrisy, and condemns nearly a thousand Americans a day to the ignominy of a trial in a Criminal court."

Based on 17 States.

Ignoring the possibility that many more states may follow repeal of the 18th amendment by providing for legal sale, the association's estimate of immediate revenue is based, solely, it is pointed out, on the following 17 states, comprising roughly forty-nine per cent of the population of the whole country: California, Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, New Jersey, Nevada, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, and Wisconsin.

"Nineteen per cent of all the tax revenue of Great Britain, 17 per cent of the tax revenue of the Dominion of Canada, 15 per cent of the government tax receipts in Sweden, fourteen per cent of all Norway's tax receipts, nineteen per cent of the whole tax revenue of Denmark, and eighteen per cent of Australia's tax collections are shown from official records to be derived from legal and controlled sale of alcoholic beverages in these countries.

No Assault on Temperance.

"The experience of other countries since the world war amply demonstrates that it is possible to collect large revenues from the manufacture, importation and sale of alcoholic beverages and at the same time to reduce liquor consumption and to improve temperance conditions generally," this report declares. "Our estimate of the revenue which would be derived from alcoholic beverages, if the 18th amendment were repealed, appears conservative when compared with the revenues actually collected in foreign countries."

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon is quoted at length on the present national deficit, particularly in his statement that "obviously we should retain some other taxes which can be relied on in times when a slowing up of prosperity may cause a falling off in incomes and a consequent drop in taxes from this source."

"There can be no doubt that the restoration of legal sale of alcoholic beverages in those states which wish a change would yield enormous revenues to federal and state treasuries," the economists of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment assert. "Our latest revised estimate, based on the 1930 census of population, puts the probable federal revenue from alcoholic beverages at $906,402,224. This new source of revenue, if it were now available, would practically eliminate our present deficit.

Waste and High Costs.

"The exorbitant profit of bootleggers and rum runners, the vast sums paid in corrupting public officials, and the waste incidental to a highly decentralized and evasive industry are all included in our national drink bill. Formerly a large proportion of the drink bill of the country found its way into federal and state treasuries. It is fair to assume that once the liquor industry is put on a legal and efficient basis the total expenditures for liquor will not exceed our present expenditures, even though a large proportion is diverted to federal and state treasuries. We believe that the saving because of more efficient methods and the elimination of the large element of graft and corruption will make it possible to include the diversion of a large proportion of the drink bill to the federal and state treasuries without increasing our annual expenditures for drink."

MILLION WOMEN TO PETITION CONGRESS TO REPEAL DRY LAW

New York, June 28.—(AP)—The Woman's Moderation union announced today that it will petition congress and the President with the signatures of more than 1,000,000 American women urging the repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

The petitions, authorized by Mrs. Louise Gross, national chairman, appeal on behalf of mothers "who feel deeply the responsibility for the welfare of the coming generation," and have watched with "greatest anxiety the growth of intemperate habits in this country."

They will be circulated to members of the Women's Moderation union throughout the country, and read, in part, as follows: "We see everywhere about us the disastrous effects of these habits. Men, women and children whose characters are ruined, whose health is undermined, whose energies are sapped and whose respect for honest work is destroyed.

"We are convinced that as long as national prohibition remains in force all efforts to make the people of the United States sober and temperate will be hopeless."

The land of the free is rapidly becoming a land of free wheeling

FIND N. Y. REALTY TAX RATE ABOVE THAT OF CHICAGO

But '30 Assessment May Put Local Levy Ahead.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

For many years Chicago public officials have solved their revenue problems by making successful pleas for more revenue. That has meant more taxes, in most cases an increase in the general property taxes.

Often the charge has been made that taxes were too high. Especially vigorous and consistent has been the charge that real estate has been asked to pay an unreasonably high portion of the tax bill.

Undoubtedly real estate taxes are much higher in Chicago than they were a few years back; but how do they compare with other communities?

Urge New York Standard.

For two decades Chicago public officials and employés have urged the New York standard of salaries. They have argued for a relative approach to the New oYrk standard of expenditures, and some have asked that certain features of the New York revenue system be adopted locally. It has been urged that certain New York taxes be adopted here to relieve real estate taxes, which it has been claimed are exorbitantly high.

Comparisons, based either upon admitted taxable wealth or upon a per capita basis, disclose that real estate taxes in Illinois are more than a fifth lower than in the state of New York. Real estate in Chicago pays less taxes, according to assessors' valuations, than New York City taxes.

How Taxes Compare.

Real estate in New York for 1929, the latest year for which comparable figures are obtainable, paid nine per cent more taxes than real estate in Chicago was asked to pay for 1929.

This comparison is on the basis that the tax valuation of Chicago real estate is 27 per cent, as the local and state taxing bodies assert, of the fair cash value; and that the tax value of New York real estate is 93 per cent of its full value, as the New York state tax commission asserts.

On this basis of reckoning, real estate in the state of New York pays $27.80 per $1,000 of full fair value, while that of Illinois pays $18.40. The difference of $4.40 per $1,000 full value indicates that the tax rate is 23.9 per cent higher in New York state than in Illinois.

New Valuations Not Ready.

In Chicago the tax assessments for 1930 are just emerging from the board of assessors. The final valuations have not been made, and so for comparative purposes it is necessary to utilize the tax year of 1929.

For that year the general property taxes levied for all purposes throughout the state of New York totaled $750,319,389. These general taxes included both real estate and personal property. The real estate has been reckoned in this presentation at 98 per cent of the total taxes levied, although the official figure is 98.65 per cent.

Accordingly, the real estate taxes levied in New York state totaled $735,802,002 and the total value of all of the real estate, according to the state tax commission, was $32,134,500,000. It is apparent that the average tax rate per $1,000 of real estate value was approximately $22.80.

For 1929 in Illinois the total general taxes levied for all purposes aggregated $404,781,318. Time and again the protestors against real estate taxes have claimed that their particular kind of property has been assessed for 80 per cent of the total. The assessment of strictly real estate is not so high, but that the complainants may have the full benefit of the error, it has been assumed that 80 per cent of the taxes levied are against real estate. So, $323,825,054 of taxes have been charged to real estate in Illinois.

Rate Placed at $18.40.

The total assessed value of the real estate is $6,393,002,000. In the reassessment of Cook county real estate, the board of assessors produced elaborate figures to prove that the average assessed value of real estate in Illinois was 27 per cent of the fair cash value. It follows that the full value of all Illinois real estate is $17,556,216,000. If real estate of that value pays $323,825,054 taxes, the rate must necessarily be $18.40 per $1,000 of real estate value.

A comparison of the taxes on real estate in Chicago and New York City give a different view, but with New York still at a disadvantage.

The Chicago tax rate for 1929 varies between $6.05 per $100 valuation to $6.29. But this is on the basis that Chicago real estate for taxing purposes is valued at 37 per cent of its fair cash value. The average Chicago rate of $6.15 per hundred would produce a tax rate on Chicago real estate at is full value of $22.75 per $1,000 of value.

New York City is limited by the state constitution to a tax rate of 2 per cent, plus certain exceptions. These additions produced a tax rate for 1929 of $26.60 per $1,000 of real estate value. But it is admitted by the taxing authorities that the real estate values are only 93 per cent of the full market value so that the actual tax rate is $24.75 per $1,000 of fair cash value.

Rate Favors Chicago.

The differences between the $24.74 New York rate and the $22.75 Chicago rate is nearly 9 per cent, and in favor of Chicago.

For the 1930 real estate taxes, now being assessed in Chicago, this city probably will have a higher rate than New York City. Reckoning that the assessed valuation will be 90 per cent of the fair cash value of real estate, the estimated New York tax rate is $24.30 per $1,000 of actual real estate value.

In 1930 a special session of the Illinois general assembly increased the tax rates in Chicago. The boost for the 1929 taxes was between 19 and 20 per cent and the added jump for the 1930 taxes will be between 9 and 10 per cent. If the valuations are not materially lowered for 1930, the Chicago rate on the full value, utilizing the assessors' 37 per cent ratio, will be $25.80 per $1,000 valuation, as compared with New York's $24.30.

The Cook county board of review has the authority to decrease valuations for the tax year of 1930, upon proper showing by complainants. Therefore, there is a possibility of action by reviewers which might cut the average rate on real estate taxes to where it may not exceed the figured rate for New York.

Realty Owners Protest.

Not only do real estate protestors claim that they are paying an excessively high tax in Chicago, but they also make this added major claim that personal property is not paying its fair share. In New York City as between real estate and personal property, the latter is assessed for only 2 per cent, while in Chicago personal property assessment is 20 per cent.

The relationship between real estate and personal property in the general property taxes of Illinois appears to represent the average opinion of all the states. The federal department of commerce has collected data on this point which permits of comparisons. It shows that the assessed value of all of the property in all the states subject to general property taxes totals $155,464,620,847. Of this total $120,127,619,216 is real estate, $28,924,936,978 personalty, and other property is $6,402,024,653. These figures are for 1928. On a percentage basis, Illinois' general property taxes follow the states as a whole.

Figures Give Comparison.

The following table shows the general property taxes levied against real estate, personal property, and other property for the nation in 1928 as compared with Illinois for 1929:

	Percentages
	All states,	Illinois,
Taxes levied against—	1928.	1929.
Real Estate	77.3	74.20
Personal Property	18.6	17.34
Other Property	4.1	8.42
Totals	99.9	99.99

In the New England states, as a whole, the personal property is a little more than 15 per cent of the total general property assessments. In New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, it is approximately 9.3 per cent. In the north central states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin it averages more than 21 per cent.

URGES GOVERNMENT SPEND 125 MILLIONS TO BUILD NEW SHIPS

New York, June 28.—(AP)—Capt. C. A. McAllister, president of the American bureau of shipping, today declared a $125,000,000 government appropriation for construction of 100 modern freight ships would relieve unemployment in Pacific coast shipyards.

Such a fleet, Capt. McAllister said, would furnish a "much needed" addition to national defense at a lower cost than such ships designed only for fighting purposes.

"A great part of our merchant marine is antiquated," he said. "Only 200 ships of the 2,600 built for the U. S. shipping board during the war remain. Upon completion of a new fleet in two years, business conditions probably will be favorable enough to enable sale or charter of the vessels to shipping firms.

"There must be provided in a very short time a considerable fleet of these modern freighters to meet the demands of our foreign trade."

Although eastern shipyards are fairly well provided with work, Capt. McAllister pointed out, the Pacific coast yards are idle. All principal plants would be kept active for two years under the plan, he said.

ORDER BONDSMEN JAILED TO PLUG UP POLICE 'LEAK'

Norton Suspects They Tip Off Lawyers.

Chief of Detectives John Norton last night ordered the police to jail any professional bondsmen found plying their trade in the police headquarters building at 11th and State streets. Head of his action, it was learned, was a conclusion that the bondsmen, who violate police regulations by entering the building, are acting as spies for beer and bootleg syndicates and other gangs of organized crimin...

Interfere in Beer War.

"One reason why we haven't been able to break up the beer war going on on the southwest side," Chief Norton said, "is that we have been prevented by court writs from questioning gunsters we pick up. Last Friday, when George Downs was brought in after he had escaped from a gang with, an application for a writ of habeas corpus was filed before he had been in the detective bureau five minutes. Since one has been informing criminals' lawyers the moment they are arrested."

A similar case was cited by Sergt. Jay Van Herik, who arrested Joe Lind, the hoodlum who was subsequently identified as a member of the gang which robbed Sidney Smith, Tribune cartoonist, and Mrs. Smith.

Suspects Headquarters Tip.

"If one saw me arrest Condi, I'm sure," Van Herik said. "Yet twenty minutes after I brought him into the detective bureau a lawyer was out at the criminal court building trying to get a writ of habeas corpus for him. Then one here in the headquarters building got in touch with that lawyer."

Chief Norton issued his order when he got an anonymous letter, written, he said, by a disgruntled bondsman, charging that some of his competitors got the run of the headquarters building.

Second Division Veterans to Honor Former Officers

FAIL TO IDENTIFY FRAUD SUSPECT IN POLICE SHOWUP

Willard Jolson, 32 years old, who was arrested on Saturday at the request of Amos Grassi, 2048 West Madison street, was viewed yesterday in the weekly police showup of suspects, but was not identified for any crime and the police continued to hold him without formal booking of Grassi's charge.

According to Grassi, he was hired by Jolson and another man in 1926 to sell an automobile device. Given a territory on the west coast, Grassi left Chicago. He said he gave Jolson and his companion a voucher on his savings account in a bank, and that he learned on his return to Chicago that they had withdrawn his money. The agreement, Grassi alleged, was that the voucher was only a security for the performance of his duty, therefore the withdrawal of the funds was fraudulent.

Five years passed and Jolson had never been arrested, although Grassi went every three or four weeks to the detective bureau and asked that a search for him be continued. The search ended Saturday when Grassi himself seized Jolson at Harrison street and Wabash avenue and turned him over to the police.

DYNAMITE STOPS $2,000,000 BLAZE STARTED BY BOY

Spencer, Ia., June 28.—(AP)—Amid the crash of dynamite explosions razing the few standing walls in the heart of the business district, city leaders of Spencer met today to plan the town's rehabilitation after yesterday's disastrous fire.

Reconstruction may start this week on the four and one-half blocks which burned after a small boy lighted his sparkler and touched off a fireworks display in the Otto Bjornstad drug store yesterday afternoon.

The flames spread quickly to other buildings and were soon out of control. Fire equipment came from seven towns, but the inadequate water supply paralyzed efforts of firemen until dynamite blasted a fire lane.

Actual loss is estimated at $2,000,000 with 23 buildings razed, 16 damaged, and 73 firms burned out.

Otto Bjornstad Jr., injured in an explosion, was recovering. No other casualties occurred.

ROB COUPLE IN AUTO.

Two robbers took $130 from James Clark, 614 South Elmwood avenue, Oak Park, as he sat in a parked automobile early yesterday with Miss Mary Stewart, in front of her home at 5534 West Congress street.

HAYS CHARGES PASTOR ASKED SHARE IN MOVIE

"Double Crosser" Retort of Church Censor.

New York, June 28.—[Special.]—The Federal Council of Churches of Christ, through a report made by its department of research and investigation and published today, has again clashed with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors, Inc. The report, which is 155 pages in length, criticizes the motion picture industry for payments to members of the federal council, who have since resigned. This started a controversy between Will H. Hays and a former chairman of the council's committee on religious drama.

WILL HAYS.

The report charges further that lack of confidence in the motion picture industry's program for improving standards prevents coöperation by churches and other religious organizations. It also alleges that an inadequate program stimulates the demand for legal censorship of the films, a question on which it reaches no conclusion.

Hays Quickly Answers.

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors, Inc., after reading the report of the council in which his power as alleged "czar" of the industry is discounted, formally answered much of its criticism in a letter to Bishop Francis J. McConnell, president of the church council.

After acknowledging the part of the report that cites a vast amount of constructive work done by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors under Hays' leadership, he adds, in his letter to Bishop McConnell, that such statements are of secondary interest because they are offset by conclusions implying that the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors had failed to coöperate in a program of self-regulation set up by the industry.

Mr. Hays charged that the investigators of the council had kept silent regarding a demand from the Rev. George Reid Andrews, when chairman of the federal council committee on religious drama, for 10 per cent of the gross receipts obtained from exhibition of the picture, "The King of Kings."

Quotes Minister's Letter.

Mr. Hayes said respecting this episode:

"If the organized picture industry has secured the coöperation of social, religious, education, and other organizations in the constructive movement for better pictures, it is because American motion picture producers have held the door wide open to every agency able and willing to promote this objective.

"Your department investigators were fully informed of a letter written to the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, under date of June 14, 1926, by the Rev. George Reid Andrews, in his then capacity of chairman of the federal council committee on religious drama and as executive secretary of the now reputedly disbanded Church and Drama association. From this letter I quote as follows:

"'That 10 per cent of the gross receipts of the picture [referring to the "King of Kings"] be paid into the treasury of our Church and Drama association only so long as I am chairman of the board of trustees or executive secretary of the organization.

Demands Control of Funds.

"'If and when I should retire from the organization, the right is reserved to me to say whether what funds remaining in the treasury or coming into the treasury shall be payable to the drama committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. If for any reason neither of these organizations can receive the funds, then they shall revert to me personally.'

"From the day he was finally made to realize that the industry would not accede to this and subsequent demands for contributions the Rev. George Reid Andrews has conducted a campaign of statements and charges against the organized motion picture industry.

Discussing the relationships between the Hays organization and organizations and individual engaged in social and religious work, the report says a list of 759 persons was submitted to the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors, whose treasurer made a sworn statement showing payments, both fees and expenses, to some of them in the years 1928, 1929, and 1930.

Answer from Pastor.

Bridgeport, Conn., June 28.—(AP)—The Rev. George Reid Andrews, former chairman of the Federal Council of Churches' committee on religious drama, today issued an answer to a charge made by Will Hays that he had sought a percentage of receipts of a certain motion picture as a contribution.

"Will Hays and Carl Milliken [one of Mr. Hays' aids] have powers of misrepresentation exceeded only by their gifts of mendacity," the minister's statement read.

"They quote a paragraph from my letter which they never answered. Let them tell the story of 'King of Kings.' They dare not."

The statement then said a picture concerning Christ and Judas was being made in Hollywood with the approval of Mr. Hays, that Mr. Andrews objected to it, that it was withdrawn, and that Mr. Andrews then gave producers material upon which "King of Kings" was later based.

"Hays double-crossed us and defeated our plan to make it and its revenue serve the churches," the statement continued. "Let him deny this. He refers to the defunct Church and Drama league. It is defunct because he bought his way into our official board and wrecked us from within and confused our friends without, but he has been caught with the goods."

GILDA GRAY GRAVELY ILL AS THE RESULT OF HEART ATTACK

New York, June 28.—[Special.]—Gilda Gray, dancer extraordinary, whose slender form has flickered on and off most of America's foremost stages, is tonight in a critical condition as the result of a heart attack Saturday evening, according to friends here. At her apartment in the Hotel Warwick visitors were denied admission, and it was said that Miss Gray's condition was extremely grave.

Because of the reticence of her attendants, Miss Gray's attack could not be learned in detail, but it was said she was being kept at the hotel, because her physicians feared the effects of strain incidental to moving her to a hospital.

While the present attack is the most severe suffered by Miss Gray, the dancer is known to have been sick for several years. She recovered from a severe illness only three years ago, at the time of her divorce from Gil Boag, but since that time she has continued her dancing. This has placed upon her a great strain, aggravating a condition which was already far from satisfactory.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

GOV. EMMERSON CALLS A CONFERENCE.

Gov. Emmerson has called a meeting to be held on Wednesday to consider the revenue problems of the state and its political subdivisions. Forty-two men have been invited. They include officials of the state as well as the local governments of Cook county, bankers, newspaper publishers, other leaders of opinion, and prominent figures in business and labor. The governor says he wishes to determine whether these gentlemen can compose their differences and unite in support of "a practical solution of the revenue problem." Presumably if they can he will recommend their program to a special session of the legislature.

The revenue problem to which the governor refers is, in reality, a complex of problems. Primarily and overwhelmingly, however, it has arisen because the governments have increased their expenditures at such a rate that the taxpayers are unable or unwilling to meet them. The increase in total tax collections is in some part legitimate, of course. In the years between 1912 and 1930, as Oscar Hewitt has shown, the population of Chicago, for example, increased about 50 per cent, and it would be astonishing, indeed, if the total costs of government did not reflect that increase. But in the same period the costs of the city and school governments in Chicago have increased 550 per cent, eleven times as fast as the population and quite as rapidly, it might be added, in relation to the cost of living.

Those comparisons reveal the true nature of the problem. It follows that only one of two courses can be charted to meet it. Either the revenue problem consists in finding means to raise more money from already overburdened taxpayers or it consists of finding means of reducing expenditures. Even if there were no difficulties inherent in the first course, the second is plainly the sounder one to follow. The raising of additional revenue can only mean a heavier burden upon the productivity of the state at a time when agriculture, industry and commerce are with difficulty holding their heads above water and when unemployment has cut off the principal income of thousands of citizens. Higher taxes can only result in a still narrower margin of profit—or still heavier losses—to the enterprises of the state, which can only result, again, in further unemployment.

The reduction of expenditures need entail no sacrifice in the essential services of government. All that need be done is to fry out the political fat, the graft and waste which accumulated during a decade of unprecedented prosperity, when economy, whether governmental or individual, seemed unimportant. United States District Attorney Johnson examined the accounts of scores of firms which had contracts with the local government for supplies or public works. He found that more than half of what was paid by the governments was in excess of a fair market price for what was received. Pay roll padding, too, has contributed enormously to the increase in the cost of government and given the taxpayer less than nothing in return for his money.

The primary revenue problem in Illinois consists in finding means of putting an end to waste and graft. Elected officials must be encouraged to cut expenses to the bone, but it is doubtful if many of them will respond to mere encouragements, for contract graft and pay roll padding have become habitual and are the means of building up and maintaining powerful political machines. Accordingly, a way must be sought of forcing a reduction of expenditures, regardless of the desires of the spenders.

In this connection it is to be noted with regret that the governor did not invite State's Attorney Swanson to his conference. A few wholesome prosecutions, a few conspicuous personalities behind the bars at Joliet, would go a long way toward creating a sense of public responsibility in the hearts of the spenders. Whatever may be the outcome of the governor's conference, it is plain that a grand jury investigation of such practices as were revealed by the district attorney is needed. A man is no less a thief because he steals from the taxpayers.

PLOTS AGAINST THE SPANISH REPUBLIC.

The summary removal of the popular aviator, Ramon Franco, as head of the Spanish air service, is a reminder of the perils still besetting the young republic. France seems to have been plotting a proletarian revolution—that is, a revolt directed by anarchist and syndicalist theorists, with help from several generals of the king's army. The provisional government acted promptly, and it is hoped the plan is squelched. But there will be others. The provisional government is flanked by irreconcilable foes. The radicals of all schools on the left, the plotters of monarchist reaction on the right. They are ready to assist each other in some measure, hoping to produce a situation of chaos in which each hopes to be able to seize power.

The fate of republicanism in Spain will be watched with sympathy and concern by the American people. It is the fate of reason and moderation, of constructive reform and true progress. It is the cause of the freeman against the tyranny of communism on the one hand and those ancient powers which have so long obstructed the intelligence of the Spanish people, blocked their advance and battened upon their meager resources. American democracy prays for the preservation of the Spanish republic and would support its government in any policy of encouragement and friendly aid which the course of our relations permits.

TO FIGHT THE GROWTH OF BUREAUCRACY.

Initiated by a group of Board of Trade men, a movement has begun "to get the government out of private business." While the experience of grain men with recent congressional and governmental action for the intended relief of the farmer actuates the proponents of the organization, it is intended to draw in representatives of all business activity who are concerned to resist the expansion of political or official regulation of private business and the growth of bureaucracy.

Such an organization, if intelligently directed and vigorously recruited, will soon justify its existence. Present business and professional associations are preoccupied with other problems and have not put up an effective resistance to the tendency to paternalism. This is evident from the almost unchecked increase of officials, bureaus, officer departments, and the piling up of government expenditures. Arthur Sears Henning has been summarizing this development in a series of striking articles in THE TRIBUNE.

The new organization will find plenty of ammunition and will need it. All the politicians who derive their power and prominence from exploiting economic hardships and inequities, real and unreal, will do their utmost to discredit the new organization. But the forum of public discussion is open and the defense of the American economic system against the encroachments of government can be made effective there. This defense has been sporadic. It needs organization for persistent action along the whole front, action in the open, backed by public discussion of the facts and the principles involved.

A JUDGMENT THAT WILL STAND.

Reversal by the Appellate court of summary proceedings by Judge Lyle against a known hoodlum no doubt expresses the law and asserts the rights of all persons, whatever their character, to due process. It is as well to remember in this connection, nevertheless, that whatever errors in law his proceedings against the underworld involved, the community has to thank Judge Lyle in great measure for the success of the drive against organized crime. It was Judge Lyle more than any other agent of the law who broke the insolence of the gangster, rallied public sentiment, and intensified the campaign against organized crime in every department. Judge Lyle risked his life and his career for the sake of the city, fighting forces powerful in politics and confident of their ability to defy the law, forces ready to kill since they had come to think themselves immune to justice. That evil day is past. The power of the underworld has been broken, at least for the present, and the leading part played by John Lyle in that victory over triumphant lawlessness will not be forgotten by his fellow citizens.

RAILROADS AS AIRPLANE OPERATORS.

The Chicago and Alton, like the New Haven, is resolved to go into the flying business. The Alton has applied for permission to operate an air line from Chicago to St. Louis.

Railroads have a distinct advantage when they venture into the new field of transportation. They can carry passengers from central business districts to the landing fields in the suburban areas by train more rapidly and more comfortably than the trip can be made in automobiles over crowded city highways. Most of the railroads have considerable areas of land in the suburbs which can be made over into landing fields at small cost, and these fields, unlike the municipal airports, would belong to the company using them and would therefore provide superior service. In addition, if weather conditions were unfavorable for flying, the passenger could be carried to his destination by train with a minimum of inconvenience. He could use the ticket he had already bought and his baggage would need no rechecking.

The shrewder railroad executives recognize that they are in the transportation business, of which the railroad is only one aspect. In a day of rapid mechanical progress they will be left behind if they continue earth bound and rail bound. If railroad investments are to remain sound the railroads must take advantage of every new method of transportation of which they can avail themselves.

LOW BRIDGES AND RIVER TRANSPORT.

[St. Louis Post Dispatch.]

The Waterways Journal in its current issue calls attention to the handicap under which river transport suffers from low bridges along the streams, a handicap which it fears will increase because new spans are being projected with clearance that will be inadequate in time of high water. Delay in opening swing and lift bridges occasions a loss to the tow lines; hence, high fixed bridges are urged. Peoria's city bridge, 55 feet above the highest known flood stage, is praised, but the new railway span at Chillicothe, 44 feet above high water, is called "inexcusably low." It is also pointed out that many old bridges are likely to obstruct barge service, and that promoters of new bridges will seek approval for the lowest structures possible to save expense.

It is obvious that the hopes for busy traffic on the Illinois and other rivers demand bridges that will not be obstructions. Modernization and reconstruction may be necessary in some cases, just as highway bridges had to be rebuilt when the motor age made teeming arteries of the public roads. This seems properly a matter for the war department's serious consideration in its function of passing upon plans for construction of new bridges over navigable streams. The needs of river transportation which will bring the country untold benefits should be considered by cities, railroads and private promoters in planning bridges so that this growing unit of our transporting system may not be handicapped in its development.

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

OUR MARCO POLOS BRING STRANGE TIDINGS.

It is most interesting to all us citizens of these United States to read the adventures and discoveries of the party of American mayors who have been exploring in France. Not since Marco Polo came back to Venice with the recitals of what he had seen in far off Asia has there been anything that so aroused the people back home. The mayors describe with great enthusiasm a peculiar fluid which the inhabitants of France drink and which is called champagne. It is described as being of a rich golden hue and with beautiful bubbles rising from the bottom of the glass. When drunk it produces a glow of happiness and generosity, the drinker often feeling inclined to take off his new suspenders and give them to a ragged beggar child.

Another strange drink discovered by our adventurers is called beer. It is made from malt and hops and is a favorite drink of the Germans who inhabit the country to the northeast of the French. However, the French have also developed a fondness for beer, especially in summer. The beer is kept in kegs placed on ice, and when a faucet is placed in one end of the keg and the bung opened a cool, bubbling stream of beer flows into the glasses, which are held out to catch it.

The mayors describe this beverage as being most delectable to the taste, say nothing is pleasanter on a warm summer afternoon than to sit at a table under the trees in a park and listen to a band play while sipping slowly from the gracious tumblers of foaming beer. Our explorers have also brought back interesting descriptions of other drinks the French have called Sauterne, port, brandy, sherry, sparkling Burgundy, and so on. All of these are declared to be very delightful to the taste. It is to be hoped that more exploring expeditions may be sent from the United States and it might be well if efforts were made by the government to bring some of these strange products of France to this country so that our enterprising industrialists can learn to manufacture them for American consumption. A new venture of this sort would, no doubt, stimulate business and prove very profitable to large numbers of our population.

LOVE SONG.

I go no more apart;
Yesterday and tomorrow
The taste of your sorrow
Is bitter on my heart,
And I am made a part
In this thrice happy hour
Of your exultant power;
I go no more apart.

"I love you, love you well,"
My deepest heart is saying,
O with what joy repaying
My debt, I cannot tell;
Now let me no fear dispel
Of peril or of pain
That sweet remote refrain,
I love you, love you well.

When I am brought to earth
And laid beyond your holding,
The placid clay enfolding
My plenty and my dearth,
That hour of second birth
Or that unwearied slumber
No sorrow shall encumber
When I am brought to earth;

For I am all your own,
And when you lean above me
The stars come down to love me,
Forsaking heaven's throne;
And I shall die alone
Some day, and end the story,
But not the secret glory;
I am all your own.

I held your heart in mine,
I took your wild heart's beating,
Your whispered words repeating,
O tender, O divine!
The water and the wine
Of an immortal meeting
I drank before its fleeting;
I held your heart in mine.

How swift the moment flies!
The soft unceasing murmur
Of the surounding summer
Sheds peace upon our eyes,
And half-heard songs arise,
Mingling, forgetting, blending,
And fade without an ending—
How swift the moment flies!

Stay by, stay by awhile. . . .
The listening night grows deeper
And Sleep above the sleeper
Weaves wonder with a smile;
But on this magic isle
We drift in dreams unsleeping,
Too sweet for words or weeping;
Stay by, stay by awhile.

THE CHICAGO SCHOOL BOARD is trying to ease over the depression by paying the teachers in scrip, which bankers and merchants refuse to accept in place of real money; and the nations of the world are going to declare a debt moratorium for a year, and nobody will pay anybody anything. We like the scrip idea best. If it's pretty you can paper the kitchen with it. And that's something.

THE HOTEL in Washington won't tell the precise amount, but it admits that Vice President Charley Curtis pays more than $5.50 a day for his ten room apartment. Well, does he pay as much as $5.75 a day? Or $5.90? If so, we'll take a suite just like Charley's and move right down to Washington. Living must be easy there.

TANNIC ACID FOR WOUNDS.

So successful has been the tannic acid treatment of burns that Dr. E. Butler proposes that we use the method in treating a variety of wounds.

When applied to burns the method consists of spraying the raw surface with a watery solution of tannic acid. Or the solution can be applied with gauze, or it can be painted on with a brush. The application is left on for a short time only, and it is made just once. The purpose is to cover the surface with a sterile layer of tanned tissue which serves to protect the underlying tissues against infection and absorption while the healing process is going on.

Given such protection, the tissues take care of the healing.

In the use of the method on other wounds, a five to ten per cent solution of tannic acid in water is made. A piece of gauze is saturated with this, applied to the wound, and left on for one hour. After that the tannic acid gauze is removed and the treatment is complete. A simple protective covering of plain sterile gauze is applied and the wound is left alone. Presently the wound is found to be covered by a tanned, leathery piece of tissue, under which healing goes on. When this piece of leather comes away the wound is found to be healed.

The method is not needed for ordinary small cuts. Such wounds bleed and ooze enough to wash away the infection commonly present on the skin. When the bleeding has stopped, if too much washing and handling has not been done, the wound is sealed by a blood clot, under which healing proceeds properly.

The process of healing is not so simple in more open wounds and sores such as rubs, scraped skin, scalds, wounds that cannot be closed, suppurating wounds, oozing wounds, poison ivy, dermatitis, the troublesome sores on the legs of children, and varicose ulcers.

The sores on the legs of children tend to pile up thick, heavy scabs. Up to a certain point these scabs accomplish a useful purpose in that they protect against infection and injury. But presently they are too large, thick and crusty to be helpful; and they irritate enough to offset the good they do by furnishing protection. The thinner, softer, more pliable leathery coat caused by the tannic acid is an improvement. The claim is that the leathery coat given to poison ivy sores lessens the irritation and burning. The larger shop wounds heal in a shorter time and with less suppuration and scar formation.

If half of the points of supposed excellence of this method are realized it will represent a material gain.

TREATING RINGWORM.

L. U. writes: My wife was troubled with ringworm of the feet. She tried several treatments. Some were temporarily beneficial but the sores returned after a week or so. Last summer she was told to bathe the feet in hot water [as hot as she could], then put two teaspoons of formaldehyde in two quarts of hot water. The infected part of the feet were to be dipped into it for a moment only, one or two times, for a few nights. This remedy was successful and she has not been troubled with the disease, or any signs of it, for a year.

RALES IN THE LUNGS.

N. N. writes:

1. Just what are rales in the lungs?
2. Are they always serious?
3. What else, besides high blood pressure, causes slight dizziness especially when stooping over or turning the head rapidly?
4. Could anemia be the cause?
5. Why do rather warm days make one feel so weak and sick?

REPLY.

1. Sounds made by air when passing through mucus and fluids. 2. Rales may be due to any of a dozen diseases—some very serious. Among the diseases of which it is a symptom are: cold on the chest, bronchitis, bronchiectasis, asthma, pneumonia, and consumption.
3. Anemia, heart disease, middle ear disease, eye strain, constipation, fatigue. 4. Yes. 5. Warm weather is somewhat relaxing. The stimulation of cold air striking the nerve endings of the skin is lacking.

FINDS WELTS ON BODY.

L. B. C. writes: I have a breaking out which starts in welts. Water under the skin breaks and a scab forms. As fast as one falls off another forms. Is this a blood disease?

REPLY.

It is not. It is probably caused by something you expose your skin to in the course of your work. Dust may be the cause.

CARBON MONOXIDE GAS.

C. W. writes: Is there any danger from inhaling carbon monoxide gas from an automobile? If so, what part of the body will it affect?

REPLY.

There is. It is great. There may be death or serious illness from acute gas poisoning, or anemia and headaches from chronic poisoning.

"SLOW ON THE DRAW."

Chicago, June 23.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A bill was paid with a certified check, but the bank closed before the check was cashed. Who is liable? Is the party, who received the check liable, as he had a week in which to cash it before the bank was closed?

A. J. B.

Section 185 of the Negotiable Instruments law is as follows: "A check must be presented for payment within a reasonable time after its issue, and notice of dishonor given to the drawer as provided for in the case of bills of exchange, or the drawer will be discharged from liability thereon to the extent of the loss caused by the delay."

Chicago, June 23.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Have been married five years. Two years ago my wife left me and is now married legally, without obtaining a divorce. Who should pay for the divorce?

A. P.

Two years desertion is a ground for divorce, but a marriage contracted before a divorce has actually been secured would be invalid. Ordinarily, the husband is ordered to pay his wife's court costs and solicitor's fees.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 29, 1915.

PARIS.—Announcement was made at the French ministry of war that Italy has broken diplomatic relations with Turkey and will send troops to the Dardanelles.

BRESCIA, Italy.—Despite the Austrian reinforcements along the whole frontier, the Italians have entered the Austrian territory south of Riva on the western side of Lake Garda through the Nota VII passes, about 5,000 feet high, descended the precipitous cliffs of Carone mountain, over 3,000 feet high, entered the Ledro valley and reached the Ponale river. The Italians, it is reported, reached a spot near Bezzeca where in 1860 the Garibaldians defeated the Austrians.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The state department made public Secretary Lansing's rejection of Berlin's proposals in regard to the sinking of the American steamer William E. Frye and its grain cargo by the German auxiliary cruiser, Prinz Eitel Friedrich. Mr. Lansing refuses to accede to the German proposal to submit the question of reparation to a German prize court and renews the suggestion that the amount of the indemnity be settled by direct diplomatic negotiation. He holds that Germany violated its treaty obligations to the United States when the Frye was sunk.

BERLIN.—The final drive to clear Galicia of the enemy is now on. Gen. Linsingen has stormed and captured the Russian fortified positions at Halicz and has crossed the Dniester, taking several thousand prisoners.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—President Wilson is determined to prevent Victoriano Huerta from interfering with the plans of the administration for restoring peace to Mexico. Huerta will be kept out of Mexico by force if necessary.

JOLIET, Ill.—Warden Edmund M. Allen went back to the prison for the first time since the death of his wife. He took up his routine duties where he had left off. He talked to the convicts in groups of twos and threes and told them he was back to carry on the work he had started. There will be no change in the honor system, he assured them.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 29, 1901.

NEW YORK.—Henry Marquand & Co., bankers and brokers, made a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, and unofficial information is that the liabilities will be not far from $3,000,000. Henry W. Taft, son of Judge Taft of Ohio, chairman of the Philippine commission, was named assignee. The failure has been expected ever since the order of the controller of the currency closing the Seventh National bank because of an unpaid debt of $1,600,000 owed by the Marquand company.

INDIANAPOLIS.—Judge William A. Woods of the United States Circuit court died suddenly while lying in his bed in his apartments at the Delaney. He was 64 years old. He became widely known through the famous Debs injunction which became an issue in national politics and "government by injunction" became a term in political parlance.

CHICAGO.—Chief O'Neil issued orders at the behest of Mayor Harrison that levee saloons frequented by women must close. Doors and curtains must be removed from the stalls.

CHICAGO.—Yesterday was the hottest June day since 1895, the thermometer reaching 95 degrees. Four deaths, two of which were suicides, and a long list of prostrations, were recorded as due to the excessive heat.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, is suffering from concussion of the brain as the result of a fall from a street car. Although his condition is critical, his physician believes he has a chance of recovery.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Jack Root of Chicago won in his battle with Kid Carter of Brooklyn in the fifteenth round on a foul, after a hard fight.

CHICAGO.—Miss Jennie M. Corey of 11 Lane place and Walter McDonald of La Grange, Ill., were married at the home of the bride by the Rev. Father Byrne of St. Vincent's church.

50 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 29, 1881.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Instructions were mailed today from the Indian office to United States Indian Agent Tufts of Muskogee, Indian territory, directing him how to proceed in the settlement of the trouble growing out of the threatened enforcement of the Choctaw and Chickasaw local "permit" laws.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—It can be stated upon authority that all reports to the effect that Attorney-General MacVeagh's retirement has been decided upon are utterly without foundation. The President has no intention of making any change in his cabinet. He is reported to have stated that he is "anxious that the star-route cases should be pushed to a final conclusion, and that no steps which will serve to convict the guilty parties shall be omitted."

BALTIMORE, Md.—Capt. Robert Hardie died at the residence of his son-in-law, Eugene L. Schley, in this city. He was the last survivor of the famous Dartmoor prison outrage, and his sufferings have become a matter of history. Capt. Hardie was born in Philadelphia June 17, 1798.

CHICAGO. — A regular monthly meeting of the Chicago Yacht club was held in the clubroom of the Sherman house, Commodore Griswold in the chair. It was resolved to hold another regatta July 16. It is to be a free-for-all race.

GRIMSBY, Ont.—The Christian conference began here. The American delegates preponderate. The Rev. H. M. Parsons of Toronto and Dr. Endman of Jamestown spoke in the afternoon, and the Rev. S. C. Needham, pastor of Moody church, Chicago, in the evening.

FROM THE FRENCH BOXING FEDERATION.

PARIS, May 28.—Once back in Paris with the team of our amateur boxers, Dr. Charles Sabeng, our delegate, member of the board, has given us account of the splendid welcome extended to him and the French team on the American soil and especially in Chicago.

Allow me now to express my most heartful thanks for all the attentions and care bestowed to give our young men such a reception as they will never forget.

We highly appreciate your kindness towards our federation and your efforts for the French sport. It is our thought that such a visit serves not only the boxing sport but that it does much to strengthen—even more if possible—the friendly relations that exist between our two countries.

With best regards, believe me,

Very truly yours,

HELP—FOR EUROPE.

Chicago, June 25.—The American taxpayers, especially those in Chicago, have been vainly seeking a solution of their tax problems. President Hoover has found it—a moratorium. Of course, they would not want the government to spend any money to relieve their distress. That would be paternalism and could not be tolerated, but if we ascend into the stratosphere of humanitarianism and donate a few hundred millions or a few billion dollars to Europe it becomes internationalism, in which the United States specializes, and from which all the other countries of the world abstain.

Of course, central Europe might be relieved by the removal of artificial trade barriers, but while that would enable her to pay her debts, it would also enable her to become strong and she might be a menace to her neighbors; but, if she can be kept in a state where she can only exist and the United States will contribute a few hundred millions a year the present situation may be maintained. As a well known English economist, whose theories always fit His country's needs, says, this is only the first step—the final step would be the cancellation of the debts owing the United States. In this Europe agrees.

Of course, after the debts are canceled Europe will need other loans for her rehabilitation and Uncle Sam will advance them, too. In due time he will be asked to cancel them and if he does not do so he will be called Uncle Shylock. He cannot stand that and, of course, will cancel them also. But if he will give up the rest of his naval stations and dispense with the rest of his navy and army he may be able to produce the desired sums. What does he need of an army or navy anyway when Europe has such large ones which Uncle Sam is helping to pay for?

If these donations were made at home they would constitute a dole, but being spent so far away they will escape that odium. After all, these payments ultimately come out of the American taxpayer, who must raise the money. The idea is great, but won't some one get Mr. Hoover to turn around and look toward this country? Reverse the plan. Give Europe the sound advice on the cardinal virtues of coöperation, economy and the necessity of paying for the waste of the war (it was their war, anyway, and they got its benefits) and give us the moratorium, followed by a reduction and ultimate cancellation of taxes, and see the resulting prosperity here.

A TAXPAYER.

GOLFING IN THE PARK.

Chicago, June 21.—I arrived at Columbus park golf course at 6:10 a. m. on Sunday morning. There were twelve foursomes ahead of us. We did not mind that in the least, but what we did object to was that other players coming after us were able to start long before us, and the same thing happens all the time. What I would like to know is how do you get a starter's job, for I would sure like to have one.

A DISGUSTED GOLFER.

PREPARING FOR THE NEXT WAR.

Chicago, June 25.—THE TRIBUNE is to be commended for keeping its sanity in regard to the Hoover moratorium. While the rest of the press grew hysterical over our "generosity" to Europe, THE TRIBUNE pointed out the inevitable consequences of this cancellation vodka. The pertinent question of the whole discussion was raised by your paper. "What got Europe into her present state?"

Aside from the monetary loss it is not a pleasant thing to contemplate the fact that we have joined England in her attempt to keep France from ruling the continental roost. Europe is already lining up for the next war and Uncle Sam has not even waited for the start of hostilities this time to take sides.

Now we are in for a lot of things. Far in the distance I seem to hear the strains of lively music. It sounds suspiciously like "Over There."

ROBERT W. SHOEMAKER.

CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME.

Chicago, June 25.—Dr. Hoover's startling plan for a moratorium on war debts deserves to be classified among the Bright Sayings of Small Children. If Dr. Hoover has suddenly become interested in saving nations from economic chaos he should start at home. A nine-nine year moratorium on the enforcement of prohibition, Volstead and Jonesology would put several billion dollars into circulation. It would hire men and buy things.

But no doubt Dr. Hoover prefers to kiss the big toe on the left foot of the Anti-Saloon league; and the brightest spot in America's future is March 4, 1933.

SCARAMOUCHE.

THE PRICE OF THE MORATORIUM.

Chicago, June 26.—The proposed moratorium in order to help the United States and Europe must be predicated upon the productive usefulness of the amount saved. It must mean that the agitation for the revision of the treaties and Young plan must stop and that the money will not be used to build battleships, support secret military organizations [der Stahlhelm] and to feed the world with propaganda pertaining to exaggerated inconvenience of the present status quo of frontiers. Also, the German government will not spend further sums to support the Pan-Germanists who are clamoring not only for union with Austria but also for additional territory to realize their dream of a Mitteleuropa which would bring on another world war. The financial aid given to Ukrainian and German instigators to keep the minority Germans and Ukrainians in our sister republic Poland in revolt must be used to help the unemployed and pay her creditors.

Otherwise Germany will repudiate her obligations at the end of the moratorium and conditions will remain the same in spite of it.

JEROME W. JURAVICH.

SCOUT SCHOLARSHIPS.

Chicago, June 25.—The writer wishes to take this opportunity to express his appreciation to THE TRIBUNE, Mr. Bob Becker and the Chicago council of the Boy Scouts of America for the wonderful assistance he has received for several of his Scouts from the Golden Glover camp fund. The joy of awarding these camp scholarships cannot be compared to the joy of the Scouts that receive them. Many thanks.

NORMAN R. HOSKINS.

SHORTENING THE SCHOOL YEAR.

Chicago, June 24.—In addition to M. E. N.'s recent article urging to cut the school term to nine months in order to reduced expenditures, the writer wishes to say that the city will save at least $3,000,000 in salaries and expenditures by so doing, and it is hardly necessary to mention that the school children will not have to attend school during the last hot weeks of June. If the private and parochial schools have a nine month school year and their students are admitted to the universities, why cannot the public schools have such a program?

RESTORE SILVER, RESTORE TRADE, ADVOCATES CRY

Domestic Problem Becomes World Issue.

Washington, D. C., June 28.—[Special.]—With the passing of William Jennings Bryan it was thought that the silver issue had also passed. Today it is to the fore again, needing but another "cross of gold" oration to dramatize it.

SEN. WM. KING. [Acme Photo.]

Silver is a mere commodity and its price is down—in the neighborhood of 26 cents an ounce. The cry of the silver sponsors is to make silver a money, just as gold is a money, and so bring its price up to a point where those who produce silver can make a profit.

It is no longer a domestic problem, as it was in Bryan's time. If it were, the answer would be simpler. It has become an international problem with all an international problem's attendant difficulties—international conferences to be called, diplomatic notes to be exchanged, intergovernmental obligations to be considered.

Might Aid World Economies.

The thoroughgoing bimetallist sees in the monetization of silver a panacea that will cure the world depression. Even conservative gold men admit that the restoration of silver to something approximating its former value is one of the methods of cure that must be tried. How to do it is the question. There have been many proposals.

Had the White House not suddenly plunged into the President's proposal for suspending war debt and reparations payments, it would now be considering one of the methods of rehabilitating silver. This method would permit debtor nations to make their annual payments to the United States in silver, the silver being received, presumably, at a premium somewhat above its present market value. But the plan had to be sidetracked, since a time when the suspension of payments was being sought did not seem to be a time to talk about means of payment.

International Parley Blocked.

Another method was to call an international conference with the hope that the governments might agree on a way of keeping silver from glutting the market. The senate suggested that the President request other powers to join in such a meeting. The President inquired and reported certain of the other powers unwilling at this time.

The senate also suggested that a loan of silver be made by this country to the Nationalist government in China. The administration frowned on the suggestion.

Still another suggestion was that some unofficial body, such as the International Chamber of Commerce, call a conference on silver, but that was killed, when the conference met in Washington, by those who insisted that an unofficial conference would be but a gesture, and wanted an official gathering or none at all.

Mining State Senators Active.

Most active worker for an international conference has been Senator William H. King, Democratic spokesman for the silver producing state of Utah. His latest hope is that Canada may be persuaded to call the conference. Negotiations to that end are under way.

Another ardent silverite is Senator Key Pittman [Dem., Nev.], and still another of more recent conversion is none other than that once forthright advocate of the gold standard, Senator Reed Smoot [Rep., Utah]. Senator William E. Borah, Idaho insurgent Republican, is still another who says that silver must be restored.

In the silver states, these days, silver is not a theory. It is an issue. Eleven western and southwestern state legislatures have passed resolutions urging an international conference.

Two Arguments Presented.

There are two broad arguments which the silver advocates put forward.

One is that the fall in the value of silver has seriously curtailed the buying power of more than half the world population in China, Mexico, parts of South America, and other countries where silver is the basis of exchange.

The other is that the world's credits have piled up into such a huge inverted pyramid that their base of some 10 billion dollars worth of gold is no longer sufficient to sustain the superstructure.

Senator King recently stated the case of silver as follows:

"It is the opinion of many that nothing has contributed so much to the present tragic economic and industrial condition as the demonetization of silver. The enthronement of gold as a sole measure and standard of value was an irreparable injury to the people of the world and the continuance of the gold standard policy will multipy the economic and political troubles of the world.

Causes World Crises.

"Even Mr. Keyne, the eminent English financial expert, in his treatise on money declares that the friends of gold will have to be extremely wise and moderate if they are to avoid a revolution. Some of the revolutions in Central and South American countries find their roots in the sterile field of gold. Obligations have been issued by nations and individuals, payable in gold, and gold is not available to meet them. The recent crisis in Germany is largely due to gold withdrawals and the fear that maturing obligations, payable in gold, cannot be met.

"There will be further political disturbances throughout the world, acute financial troubles and continued economic distress unless important modifications shall be made in the fiscal policies of nations. Gold has not been handled wisely. There is a maldistribution of it; and that its inadequacy to meet financial and economic conditions is becoming apparent to the most dogmatic and hide-bound monometallist. Mr. Keyne's warning is being realized. Revolutions have occurred and there will be others."

Argument a Century Old.

The troubles of silver trace back to 1816 when, after centuries in which silver and gold had gone hand in hand on a ratio in proportion to their production, Great Britain adopted the gold standard. It was not until 1873 that the United States and Germany took to the gold standard. From then on silver's debasement has grown more acute. The replacement of the silver content of silver coins with other metals added to the world supply.

Then in 1926 the British government of India started to put that country on a gold basis. This meant the disposal of the large silver reserve and threw another huge mass of the metal on a market already depressed.

The present situation is the result. From approximately fifty cents an ounce in the early part of 1929 silver has declined to about half that value today.

EGYPT WILL SEND ITS TEACHERS TO ABYSSINIA'S SCHOOLS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 28.—The Egyptian foreign office has turned over to the ministry of education a request from the government of Abyssinia for a number of primary and elementary school teachers.

Although the literate population of the Nile valley amounts to only 10 per cent, Egypt will send the educational mission to Addis Abbaba. The minister of education has circularized all government schools asking for recruits.

Many volunteers have appeared. Most of them are Coptic Christians for two reasons—they are further advanced educationally than their Moslem brothers and they belong to the same church as the Abyssinians.

FOUND!

10 YEARS OF YOUTH IN JUST 25 HOURS

There is no magic road to youth, health, beauty. But there is the scientific and sure Muscle Sense way to reduce those beauty and health-destroying pounds.

Out of Mr. White's 25 years of experience—his university training in anatomy—he has developed a system for reducing and health building that never fails.

A Few Minutes a Day

Mr. White has found that by just a few minutes each day of Muscle Sense exercise you can strengthen and tone the muscles which control the heart, liver, lungs, kidneys, and intestines. Circulation improves. The fatty deposits are carried away by the blood. You look and feel like a different person. Eyes are bright, skin is fresh and clear, you are full of the energy you have been lacking for so long.

A Different Vacation

Vacations should build health—but often they undermine it. This year decide to take a Muscle Sense vacation. Stay right here in Chicago and enjoy our wonderful summer resort at home. But spend a few minutes a day on Muscle Sense—and go back to work feeling and looking 100% better. When you see the wonderful results in reducing—when you find your skin so much younger looking—your eyes shining with health—you will say this is the best vacation you ever had.

Building Up or Reducing

Mr. White builds up underweight women as well as reducing those who are overweight.

Ankles, thighs, calves, hips, waist, abdomen, double chin—any part may be made smaller.

Pounds Do Not Return

When you reduce the Muscle Sense way pounds do not come back. Two years, three years later you still keep the same weight. That is why women are so enthusiastic about Muscle Sense. That is why they recommend it to their friends. Once you have taken off the excess pounds they are gone permanently!

Like No Other System

Do not confuse Muscle Sense with other reducing systems. It is like no other method. It builds your health while reducing you. Mr. White is not satisfied merely to bring your weight to the proper point. That is only part. He sends you out of his studios glowing with health—feeling and looking years younger. Often serious illness is prevented through the toning of the vital muscles through Muscle Sense.

See Mr. White—let him show you letters from happy women who have found youth, health, beauty through Muscle Sense.

$15,000 CASKETS OF GANGSTERS JUST A MYTH

"Expensive" Burials Cost About $300.

New York, June 28.—[Special.]—Those $15,000 and $20,000 caskets the public read about in stories of gangster funerals exist only in imagination, casket makers and funeral directors disclosed today. They cost, on the average, between $400 and $600, although in some cases—very rare cases—the families spend as much as $1,500 to $2,000.

When the Torrio-Genna-Capone gang machine gunned Dion O'Bannion in Chicago seven years ago the high priced casket legend made its first appearance. They said Dion's casket was solid silver and cost more than $10,000. One of the leading casket manufacturers in the country said today that you could not buy a silver casket for that price.

Cost About $400.

"The highest priced casket on the floor," he waved at a display almost a quarter of a block long, "is a cast bronze model, an elliptic shape, that costs $12,000. A gangster wouldn't want it because it isn't flashy. He wants one that glitters with a silver tone, that is sprayed on like paint or a silver plate, and they run anywhere from $400 to $2,000."

Solid silver caskets are not kept in stock. The manufacturers cannot afford to tie up too much money in an article they may never sell. To have one made to order is a matter of weeks, sometimes of months.

New York gangsters do not get the expensive burials they are supposed to have. Joe (The Boss) Massaria, who was shot down in Coney Island last April; Frankie (Yale) Uale, who was killed in Brooklyn two years ago, and Dan Jamascia, who was slain a week ago Thursday, were buried in what their friends described as $10,000 or $15,000 caskets.

"It always give me a laugh when I read the accounts of those funerals," said the vice president of one of the foremost of the city's undertaker's establishments in this city, "because I know the caskets seldom cost more than $200 or $400 and that the cost of the whole funeral, exclusive of the floral tributes, is much more apt to be less than $1,000."

Reveal Burial Racket.

Racketeering, as District Attorney Thomas C. T. Crain pointed out some time ago, extends into the grim business of burial. A representative of one of the much advertised undertakers of New York told of one little trick employed to make gansters' funerals seem impressive. He said there are one or two undertakers who own coffin cases of real metal which they rent out.

This metal case is clipped over the cast iron casket and catches the glitter of the funeral candles, because it is genuine, but before the gangster is laid to rest the case is slipped off again.

Fear of Prosecution Swells Collections.

A total of $560,723 collected in delinquent federal income taxes during the month of June made the First Illinois district second only to New York in such collections since the first of the year, Acting Collector Robert E. Neely announced yesterday.

The total collected to date this year is $2,329,837, as compared with $1,625,459 collected during the same period last year, Mr. Neely said. The $560,723 collected during the month of June was 10 per cent of all the delinquent income taxes paid during the month throughout the country.

Money from Crooks.

Mr. Neely ascribed the increase in delinquent payments here to the government's successful criminal prosecution of gangsters, racketeers and grafting politicians who attempt to dodge their income taxes.

Chief among those who have been successfully prosecuted for income tax evasion is Alphonse Capone, the biggest of all gangsters. He pleaded guilty on June 16 to withholding $215,000 in taxes due to the government and also to a charge of conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws. He is to be sentenced in federal court tomorrow.

Before United State's Attorney George E. Q. Johnson launched his attack on the politico-criminal alliance with the income tax lash three years ago, Mr. Neely said, illicit income was seldom scheduled in tax returns, the individuals fearing that the source would be disclosed by the government for prosecution on prohibition and other charges.

"At present the gamblers, bootleggers and other racketeers feel no hesitancy in scheduling illicit income," said Mr. Neely. "They are moved both by the assurance that information in income tax returns remains a secret with the treasury department and by the fear that they will be prosecuted if they don't pay up."

Gamblers Pays $365,000.

The highest delinquent tax collected from an individual this year was $365,000 paid by a gambler, according to Mr. Neely, and the second highest was $225,000 paid by Dr. Frank I. Nathanson. This payment by Dr. Nathanson, covering penalties and interest over a 10-year period, became public because the government had to institute suit to collect a trust fund he had established in an alleged effort to evade the tax.

Many hoodlums, bootleggers and gamblers who have never filed returns have come in voluntarily and settled. Such action precludes criminal prosecution, except in cases where fraudulent attempts already are under investigation by agents of the intelligence unit of the revenue bureau.

FIRE IN HAIR STORE.

Fire, believed to have been started by an overheated motor left running when the shop closed Saturday, did damage estimated at $1,500 to the quarters of the Consolidated Hair Dressing parlors, on the fifth floor at 14 North Michigan avenue, yesterday.

Hunt Shotgun Owner Who Fired on Woman

Police yesterday sought the owner of a shotgun who is believed to live near 1146 West Adams street, whom they suspect of firing at Mrs. Elizabeth Sutherland, 55 years old, 117 North Peoria street, because she was having a noisy argument with her husband in front of the Adams street address Saturday night. She was taken to the county hospital, wounded by three shotgun slugs.

JOB CRISIS TO BE DISCUSSED HERE BY U. S. TEACHERS

American Federation to Open Session Today.

Unemployment among teachers in America promises to be a leading topic of discussion when the fifteenth annual convention of the American Teachers' federation opens this morning at the Congress hotel.

Due to the economic difficulties faced by teachers throughout the country, such as that which has arisen from Chicago's present salary muddle, only 150 delegates from local chapters are expected to attend this year's convention. The convention will last five days.

The five organizations represented by the Chicago teachers' unions will send six boats to the convention. They are the Men Teachers' union, the Federation of Women High School Teachers, the Elementary Teachers' union, the Board of Education Playground Teachers' union, and the Educational Secretaries' union.

Thief Steals Auto, Arsenal of Tear Gas Guns, Bombs

Somewhere about Chicago there is an automobile thief equipped to repel police with an arsenal of tear gas guns and bombs. The tear gas was in the automobile of Elliot Wisbrod, a salesman for the devices, which was stolen yesterday from in front of his home, 918 Reba place, Evanston.

YOU will be amazed at the flavor appeal that Hellmann's Mayonnaise has for men. Indeed, it offers a sure way to induce almost any husband to eat the salads that he needs.

The reason for its unique flavor? Carefully chosen ingredients, first of all. Breakfast eggs, special salad oils, thrice strained vinegar, a unique blend of Far East Spices. All mixed to the exact proportions of its famous old French recipe.

And then double whipping . . . a special, scientific blending process that mixes the ingredients to a harmony of perfection.

Try Hellmann's Mayonnaise on the next salad you serve your husband. If either of you feels that it does not measure up to every promise we make, please take back the jar and get your money.

Get a pint or half-pint jar today. Hellmann's is the mayonnaise that always has been identified by the Blue Ribbon on the label. It is sold by your grocer.

WORK OR STARVE, IS SOVIET METHOD OF RULING NATION

If That's Forced Labor, Then They Have It.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VLADIVOSTOK, May 24.—[By Mail.]—Forced labor in Russia today? That depends on exactly what is meant by the term.

If forced labor means men and women being actually made to work by soldiers prodding them with bayonets, then no, there is none, or very little. Not enough to be seen, anyway.

But if forced labor means placing a person in front of a given task and telling him he must perform that to eat, otherwise he will surely starve and if that person is forcibly prevented from going elsewhere to earn his living, then the reply must be yes.

One Huge Concentration Camp.

If that last is forced labor, then all Russia is just one huge concentration camp of forced labor, and shortages of man power only exist in the coal mines of the Don basin and certain other special areas because of the inefficiency of the system for controlling the huge population.

Theoretically, and by decree, every man and working woman in the country is nailed to the job he holds and cannot change it or move elsewhere without written permission, and if he obtains that, he must then report to the authorities in his new location and offer himself for employment there.

Railway men were thus mobilized, and coal miners, and all having experience in factory work, manufacturing of any kind, and lumberjacks were called, and the textile employés summoned, and now the peasants are subjected to the régime also.

Travel by Permit Only.

To catch those not embraced in the categories mentioned in the dragnet for utilisation somewhere, the government has prepared a new decree prohibiting travel on any railway without a certified permit, stating whence the passenger came, where he is going and why he is making the journey.

The soviet government does not want any large groups of idle men wandering about the country. They are potential trouble centers. Keep them working, so they will be tired at night and go to bed, instead of hanging around stolovayers and pivos and talking politics and roasting the régime and complaining about being hungry.

Visit any factory or take a look at any job, excavations or what not, and see the vast number of men "working"—dawdling along, picking here and there, then resting. Ask any American engineer about the number of employés in the plant where he is attached. He will tell you they have anywhere from five to ten times as many hands as they need, that the surfeit of labor actually impedes work. They get in each other's way and lazy ones slow up industrious hard workers by gabbing with them.

Makes Good Propaganda.

But the state enterprises keep them all on the pay roll at their miserable wages, and if one is fired it merely means he is transferred to something else. Being shifted to the mines of the Don basin is one punishment; being sent to the timber cutting regions of the north is another.

The government keeps this enormous army on its pay roll because keeping them occupied, no matter how relatively, keeps them out of mischief, and furthermore it is good propaganda for the communist régime to inform the local population and misguided sympathizers abroad that "there is no unemployment in soviet Russia; in fact, there is a shortage of man power."

It costs nothing, anyway, merely the printing of a few extra rubles, which all come back to the company store or the local shop where the worker must buy his bread and tea and tobacco, and occasionally vodka.

Drive for Steel Workers.

Just now a tremendous drive is going on to recruit workers for the "Kus-Bas" development, the creation of a steel industry in the Kus-netsk basin, which the Freyn Engineering company of Chicago is supervising. Naturally, the American engineers have nothing to do with how the labor is obtained, nor do they necessarily know that the thousands of lean and hungry looking peasants driving into the zone every day in their little springless wagons, drawn by emaciated horses, their ribs showing through, have been compelled to report for work there.

They were ordered to report and told that their food cards for stores in the community where they had been dwelling would no longer be honored, that they could purchase no more bread for themselves and families, and no more fodder for their horse while they remained. Rather than starve, the poor devils start off on their long ride, sometimes a couple of hundred miles away, to their assignment.

Government Controls Food.

Elimination of private stores and direct control of all food supplies has given the government full command over labor. Simple withdrawal of the food card means starvation for its holder, unless he agrees to the dictates imposed on him. He cannot hope to appease his hunger unless he joins the distranchised, expropriated classes in the larger cities.

Capital punishment has been done away with in Russia except for crimes against the state, treason, sabotage, in fact almost any offense can be stretched into this category. A criminal, the most hardened murderer, will not be put to death.

But for the most trivial offense, or for no reason at all, the authorities will calmly take up the food book of some individual, thus indirectly condemning him to a slow death of starvation. Or with equal indifference it will exile him to some remote hamlet, where, without tools, equipment or capital, he is inevitably reduced to becoming a public charge or slowly expiring from hunger.

NEW YORK CITY ASKS INDUSTRY TO EMPLOY THOUSANDS NOW IDLE

New York, June 28.—[Special.]—Commissioner Frank J. Taylor, chairman of the mayor's official committee on unemployment, today addressed an appeal to chambers of commerce, business men's organizations, trade groups and community associations urging them to elect committees to serve as agencies of contact with the city's free employment agency operated by the department of public welfare.

Such contact, Commissioner Taylor believes, will facilitate greatly the distribution of available jobs and will help increase opportunities for work. In addition, Commissioner Taylor plans to continue the campaign for jobs by means of the radio and the press.

"There appears to be very little improvement in industry, and we are compelled, in a great measure, to rely on the odd or temporary job in the office, home, store or factory as a means of immediate relief," Commissioner Taylor said today.

Church Sympathizes with Yarrow, Now in Jail

The Rev. Philip Yarrow was given a unanimous vote of sympathy and confidence yesterday by the Morgan Park Congregational church. Mr. Yarrow, who is the superintendent of the Illinois Vigilance association, is now in the county jail for refusing to pay a judgment against him held by Walter Shaver, a bookseller whose arrest Mr. Yarrow procured on a charge of selling improper books. The Rev. F. M. MacKenzie of the Morgan Park church announced that the resolution was drawn up by F. M. Pond and was unanimously adopted.

'TEMPLE OF BALI,' DUTCH EXHIBIT AT PARIS, BURNS

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, June 28.—The Dutch pavilion, one of the most elaborate and beautiful buildings in the French colonial exhibition at Vincennes, was destroyed by fire early this morning. The building, which was a reproduction of the temple of Bali in the Dutch East Indies, was reduced to ashes and a fine collection of native art treasures was lost. The damage is estimated at $2,000,000.

As it was mainly built of wood and was filled with inflammable material, the building burned with tremendous rapidity. Firemen, who devoted their attention to preventing the fire from spreading, succeded in saving surrounding buildings.

The Dutch architect who built the pavilion was asleep in the building and was forced by the flames to jump from a window. Several native dancers were saved with difficulty.

The pavilion was inaugurated by Queen Wilhelmina of Holland only two weeks ago.

Child Dies as Sister Rolls on Her in Bed

The three young daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Brobowski, 2306 Fisk street, tossed restlessly in their bed through the heated night Saturday and early yesterday. During the early morning hours Mrs. Brobowski went to see how the children, Irene, 4 years old, Bernice, 2 years old, and Helen, 6 months old, were sleeping. She found Helen lying motionless. She was dead, one of her sisters apparently having rolled over on her in her sleep.

British Author Writes Quiet, Delightful Book

Tale Which War Falls Like Air Bomb!

BY EDITH WEIGLE.

The author of "The Garden," published in this country three days ago by Alfred A. Knopf, is a young English writer, L. A.G. Strong. He was educated at Brighton and Wadham college, Oxford, where he was one of a group that included Aldous Huxley, Robert Nichols and Robert

L. A. G. STRONG.

Graves. After his graduation he taught for a time in a famous English preparatory school, leaving in 1920 to devote all of his time to writing. He is at present living in London. Besides this novel he has written another, "The Hideous Ghost," and a book of short stories called "The English Prize."

"The Garden" is a book chosen by the Book League of America for which it was first brought out in England a few months ago. It is one of those rare treasures, a really beautiful creation that deserves all the superlatives at one's command, and then some.

In the first place, it is a quiet book and that alone rather sets it apart, doesn't it? It does not come under the head of thriller, psychological case study, smarty-smarty, or arty-arty. It is not a deep or profound piece of work. It has no ax to grind, no point to point. It is just a thoroughly human and exquisitely told story of a little English boy's holidays in Ireland.

From the very first page, where Denis is standing at the boat's rail, busily polishing his toy monkey and busily trying to find the face of his father among all the strange white faces on the dock, the artist's hand is at once reaches out and seizes your interest and holds it right straight through to page 351 and the last words.

"And here we may leave them, and the story, for, by its very nature, it can never be completed. Yet, if it does no more than suggest to some, whose imagination will not run far backwards, that even in those distant days the sun shone warm, and the world was good, it will have served its purpose."

Indeed, it does serve its purpose. It takes back a pre-war Ireland, a little high house set in a flowering garden and filled with kindly, humorous folk—a paradise to which a small child returned each summer as a grown man returns to a banquet. I have never been Ireland, no matter.

The enchanting and delicious are Denis's characters. About little Denis circulate his mother, a beautiful and understanding person; his stern, English and rather remote; his fond Granny and his grandfather, a gruff but charming old chap who is dead in the Ireland of the '50s but lives and thinks Dickens is the finest novelist the world ever produced. Bamie, the cook and the best friend of little boys; Paddy-the-Cope, a strange and enthralling pet; the twins, Con and Eileen, and his little younger sister, Eithne, and his rollicking companion and mentor, Paddy. Mr. Strong lives in a warm and colorful world that wraps him around like a cozy, protective arm.

Nothing is farther from one's thoughts than the world war until, with the suddenness of an explosion, it is there, in the epilogue, and changes and death. But, after all, nothing can take away the picture of the appealing, beguiling child.

And here is his last view of the garden:

Movie Gossip from Hollywood

Hollywood, Cal., June 28.—[Special.]—Sergei Eisenstein, the Russian film director who was imported from the soviet studios to the accompaniment of tinkling press agent symbols and the jingle of many of Paramount's good cash American dollars, but who wasn't allowed to direct any films here because the higher ups got panicky about Russian propaganda, has been "rediscovered" by the Hollywood film scouts.

Eisenstein is hidden away in a hacienda down in Mexico, in the state of Hidalgo, busily engaged in directing a motion picture which, if as striking as the film scout from Hollywood reports, probably will be bought up greedily by one of the biggest American film companies for exhibition.

"Properly the picture does not embody a plot," Eisenstein said, "it is like a host on a series of voyages."

It has seven episodes and is said to have a flashback to the Aztec empire before the Spanish conquest.

Romance has budded in the life of Elsie Janis, but the one time stage queen, who has been working here for months as a screen writer, says that it isn't all exactly definite yet. Gilbert Wilson, a budding young motion picture actor, is the man. Concerning reports of their engagement, Miss Janis s[illegible] "I am not denying that we might be married."

The name of the autobiography which Elsie Janis is writing is "So Far So Good."

Rochelle Hudson, little girl who recently was picked out of the extra ranks to become a leading lady at RKO, has been given the coveted central rôle of the modern girl in "Are These Our Children?"

Paramount, so it is said, has paid H. L. Gumbin, an independent producer, $250,000 to acquire "The Mad Parade," a film which features Evelyn Brent, Louise Fazenda, Lilyan Tashman, and an all woman supporting cast.

The team of Warner Baxter and Eddie Lowe, which made a hit, with Warner as the Frisco Kid and Lowe as the soldier assigned to bring him in, in "Old Arizona," will be reassembled by Fox in "The Silver City." This time it will be Concheta Montenegro, now in Europe, who will play the border vamp.

Lionel Barrymore cracks that the best break he got in 1931 was losing so much money he won't need to pay any income tax.

Dorothy Lee, little leading woman, who married at 19, is separated at 20 from her husband, Jimmy Fidler, film agent. He says: "Neither of us is to be blamed." Their attorneys have announced a divorce suit will follow.

Although Warners and Paramounts both underwent drastic retrenchments lately, Warners laying off 300 persons and Paramount cutting salaries 10, 15, and 20 per cent, the officials at the two studios still support their own polo teams. Warners' quartet, composed of Darryl Hanucy, Ray Griffith, Michael Curtiz, and Lucian Hubbard, defeating Paramount, 11 to 3. John Cromwell, James Gleason, Tom Moore, and Cy Bartlett played for the losers.

By Mae Tinée.

Good morning!

Lewis Stone and Elissa Landi deserve better yarns than this one!

"Always Good-bye" is a detective story introducing, sketchily, characters that could and should have been more strongly drawn. It lopes along at a lazy pace, pausing often to nibble on loco weed. There are few convincing situations in the entire production.

So much for the narrative.

Miss Landi, hampered by her rôle and restive under the ill-balanced load, proves as has been demonstrated before that even an excellent player can sag under strain. She bears up reasonably well, however, and in other pictures will undoubtedly fulfill the great expectations roused by her work in the stage play, "Farewell to Arms," and in the movie, "Body and Soul."

Lewis Stone is all you could ask of him as a nature's nobleman who believes in the gal when even Scotland Yard growls, "Look out!" Paul Cavanagh plays a well groomed confidence man-bigamist-yegg and general all around bad vegetable, who is, you will agree, the dumbest crook seen in years on any screen. Other parts are handled as well as the scenario permitted. Direction is quite apt.

Camp Reinberg Opens Today for Poor Kids

Good news for many more of the needy mothers and children in Chicago's "back yard" areas was contained yesterday in the announcement that Camp Reinberg, the county's recreation spot in the Deer Grove forest preserve, would open today.

Underprivileged youngsters and their mothers are already being signed up for attendance for the ten day periods, according to Emmett Whealan, president of the county board. Selections are made through the Juvenile court and the county bureau of public welfare, under Joseph L. Moss.

About 3,500 persons will be sheltered at the camp during the season, going in groups of 500, and will be superintended and cared for by a staff of directors, nurses, and Boy Scouts.

Here's Another Reason to Help Free Ice Fund

Story of Baby's Food Involves Life, Too.

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

Jimmie T—— isn't 10 years old as yet, but life in a poverty ridden district has taught him wisdom of a sort. For that wisdom one family in his immediate neighborhood had cause a few days ago to give heartfelt thanks. The incident, as it happened on Chicago's southwest side, was related by a social service worker.

"Jimmie was sitting on the curbstone when I passed by to visit one of three families I had been calling on in that block," she tells, "when this youngster, evidently waiting in hopes I'd be along, looked around and saw me. He got up, shoved his hands deeper into his pockets, and announced in his piping little voice: 'I'd better see about that baby.'

"I stopped and asked him, 'What baby?' Jimmie ducked his head to indicate the house in front of which he was stationed, and confided in a lower voice: 'Somep'ns th' matter in there. That baby that cries so much hasn't cried at all this mornin'. Maybe he's dead.' That waas enough. I went up and rapped on the open door.

"If I'd been a day or so later I needn't have come at all. Jimmie was right—something was wrong. The stooped little woman who finally answered my knock led me into a dark, sweltering inner room, where I found a tiny baby stretched out on a cot, and too weak to cry. He was a desperately sick baby, undernourished and lacking, when he did get food, the wholesome sort that would keep him well and happy."

Thanks to Jimmie's expressed misgivings, a physician who was called says the danger is over, though proper care and proper food will be needed to restore the little fellow to normal health, and it's going to take time.

This one baby is significant because that situation is repeated so frequently these days. Sweet milk is one of the main articles of a baby's diet, and milk won't keep sweet without ice in such weather as Chicago has been experiencing the past few days.

Donations for either may be mailed to the cashier of THE TRIBUNE, at Tribune Tower, and will be acknowledged here.

HOW RAVINIA DOES ITS SHARE TOWARD OVERCOMING HEAT

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Ravinia's contribution toward ameliorating weather conditions was to provide soma week-end music of highly enticing kinds. It began Saturday night with Puccinni's "Manon Lescaut," in which Lucrezia Bori was the ravishing star, with almost stellar assistance from Giovanni Martinelli as the young man and a remarkable character sketch by Louis D'Angelo as the old man. It continued Sunday afternoon, when the Chicago Symphony orchestra gave an attractive concert and Daniel Saidenberg, defying damp strings and all other handicaps of the season, brilliantly played Lalo's concerto for cello.

The Sunday night attraction was "The Barber of Seville." Just at present one is in a bit of doubt whether the cast should be called singers or comedians.

They were great in both respects and in both they were artists. Florence Macbeth, as Rosina, singing better than she has for several seasons, was at the top in her dainty, presentation. Mario Chamlee, one of the finest tenors on the stage today, did some marvelous singing in the first scene and some marvelous comedy thereafter. Another fine voice and highly skilled impersonation appeared in the Figaro of Mario Basiola. As for Vittorio Trevisan, as Dr. Bartolo, and Virgilio Lazzeri, as Don Basilio, one is likely to run out of adjectives before exhausting their case. Never was the old school of fun making handled more deftly and certainly never did it appear a more vital source of humor.

This was a great cast whose glory radiated over Ravinia and registered another high point in the history of that persuasive place. Here was the best of good light music and the best of fun, and that is no small order.

THE STAGE

A MESSAGE of optimism from the Adelphi theater indicates that "High Hat," Edna Hibbard's new comedy, is making a successful stand against the hot wave. The bulletin promises an all summer run and says nothing at all about Gregory Ratoff's revue, which was recently promised a mid-July première at this playhouse. Perhaps the Adelphi's management has forgotten about Mr. Ratoff's show. To clear up the matter a report comes from Broadway to the effect that Mr. Ratoff's plans to become the Ziegfeld of Chicago have been called off.

The name of Margaret Anglin was recently mentioned in dispatches as a possible member of Fritz Leiber's all star Chicago Civic Shakespeare company next season. Miss Anglin rises from her retirement to enter a denial.

The Shubert Theatrical corporation has three musical shows for staging within the next two months. One of them, "Kissable Girl," a librettization of "Up Pops the Devil," will have its first performance in Atlantic City Aug. 3. Another is a vehicle for Queenie Smith, bearing the title of "Hearts in Repair." Its career will start at Brighton Beach, N. Y., Aug. 17. The third is an adaptation from the German called "Cocktail." Its tryout is scheduled for Brighton Beach Aug. 31.

Eugene O'Neill has been making a diligent study of the stage of his native land since returning from his long European sojourn. He has come to the conclusion that the American drama is a decidedly promising affair, but the American actor needs improving. He says:

"The American theater is in splendid shape and far surpasses the European theater. It has developed a group of playwrights who have progressed while the drama of the rest of the world has gone backward. But the actors are not keeping pace with the dramatists. There are too many 'type' players. We need more permanent acting companies and repertory troupes to develop acting talent."

Some ten days hence Mr. O'Neill and his wife [Carlotta Monterey] will leave New York for a journey to California.

Texas Guinan is losing no time in preparing for the theatrical exploitation of her recent misadventure in France. A revue based on the incident, written for her use under the title "Too Hot for Paris," will start off July 6 on a frolic among the eastern seashore resorts. Miss Guinan hopes for a Broadway première, at the Bayes theater, late in July.

Pauline Lord, who has done little acting since her great success in "Anna Christie," will return to the stage next fall in a play called "Effie Gallows," written by Claire Spenser. She will participate in its tryout performances by a stock company in Magnolia, Mass., this summer.

Group Favors Less Drastic Divorce Rules

Episcopal Board Would Sanctify Remarriage.

New York, June 29.—(AP)—The joint commission on divorce of the general convention of the Protestant Episcopal church made public today an amendment to its proposed canon on divorce.

It provides for the marriage of divorced persons in Episcopal churches by clergy of the church, using the regular prayer book service, but gives to any clergyman the right to decline to officiate.

This amendment goes a step far[illegible] than the proposal published April 27 that authorized Episcopal clergy to remarry divorced persons under certain conditions, but forbade the use of the prayer book service and the use of Episcopal churches for the ceremony.

Members of the commission said the change was made to meet a storm of adverse criticism of the original suggestion, but there are indications, they added, of a fresh wave of protest over the amended plan.

In an amendment to the amendment a minority bloc of the commission proposed that the marriage of a divorced person "may not be performed by a minister of this church, but if the parties are married by civil authority no impediment shall exist to their membership in the church, and a minister may, in his discretion, bless the union."

Still a third plan was put forward by Origen S. Seymour. It met with the approval of several of his fellow members of the commission.

It provides an ecclesiastical court shall decide whether the conduct of the divorced person seeking to remarry was in any slight way responsible for the divorce and whether the applicant reasonably could have done anything to avoid the separation.

If these questions are answered in favor of the applicant, permission for the remarriage may be granted. The ceremony then may be solemnized by an Episcopal clergyman in an Episcopal church and with the prayer book service.

Under all three plans one year must elapse after the divorce before application for permission to remarry can be filed, and then the ecclesiastical court, appointed by the bishop of the diocese, must investigate "the characters and personalities of the parties to the previous and proposed marriages and determine whether the spiritual welfare of the parties thereto and of society will be served by the proposed marriage."

All three plans will be presented to the general convention of the church in Denver Sept. 16 for action. Meanwhile the commission will hold another meeting to draw up a final report and has invited criticism and suggestions.

Other changes made in the proposed canon include a clause providing for the organization of the ecclesiastical courts in each diocese. In the last report this was presented merely as a suggestion.

There is, likewise, a rewording of the statement which must be signed by all persons before they can be married by an Episcopal clergyman. It now reads:

"We, desiring to receive the blessing of the church upon our marriage, do solemnly declare that we hold the ideal of Christian marriage to be a lifelong physical and spiritual union of husband and wife for the purpose of mutual fellowship, encouragement and understanding, for the procreation [if it may be] of children and their physical and spiritual nurture, and for the safeguarding and benefit of society.

"And we engage ourselves, so far as in us lies, to make every effort to realize the Christian ideal and to avail ourselves of means of grace thereto as taught and provided by the church."

In a statement accompanying the report the Rt. Rev. Herman Page, formerly of Chicago, now bishop of Michigan and chairman of the commission, told of the two schools of thought on divorce in the Episcopal church. He said both felt the plan proposed of allowing remarriages outside the church or with a form different from that in the prayer book, would "really be allowing a sort of inferior or back door type of marriage which is unworthy of the church."

One group, he said, thought any remarriage of divorced persons contrary to the teachings of Christ, and looked on the proposal as un-Christian and immoral.

The other group he described as feeling that something should be done to enable clergymen to remarry those divorced for causes of which they themselves were innocent, regardless of what those causes were.

Episcopal Clergy Meet Today for Lessons in Preaching

An Episcopal conference composed of clergy and laity from the diocese of Chicago will open today for two weeks' sessions at St. Alban's school, Sycamore. The leaders of the conference, including Bishop George Craig Stewart of Chicago, and Bishop Stephen E. Keeler of Minnesota, will discuss the more acute problems which face religious leaders today.

Bishop Stewart was announced by the Rev. Gerald G. Moore, director of the conference, to give a series of lectures on the art of preaching for the local clergy. Bishop Stewart's course will continue throughout this week. Bishop Keeler's subject during the second week of the conference will be "The culture of the soul."

The Rev. Dr. Robert S. Flockhart of New York will represent the national council of the church, and will give a series of addresses on the world situation in regard to church work.

Woman Who Owns Circus Asks Children to Be Her Guests

If there are any children in Chicago—and there must be some—who would like to see a circus free the next couple of days, Mrs. Charles R. Walgreen has made it possible for them to do so. Today and tomorrow at both the afternoon and the evening performance of the Fresh Air Circus at the Coliseum, juveniles will be admitted without charge to view the sixty acts that make up the circus. For Mrs. Walgreen owns the show. Unprecedented heat of this season so affected the attendance at the circus that it began to appear, in view of the minimum crowds attending, that the performers would go without salaries. The original agreement had been that the actors anad actresses would be paid out of the gate receipts, while the money obtained from the sale of thousands of advanace tickets would go to the various charity agencies participating. Mrs. Walgreen, who had been chairman of the committee in charge, then stepped in and purchased the "whole shebang."

Doris Comments on Recent Report About Married Discontent

BY DORIS BLAKE.

One wonders if the current axiom about it being fashionable to be thrifty couldn't be paraphrased to apply to married life: "It's fashionable to be unhappy."

At a recent conclave at Philadelphia an analysis of happiness in the married life of 1,000 cultured American women indicates that 365 had no complaints to offer; 30 women had spells of discontent, and 375 were "fashionably discontented" [only the report was worded that way]. Widows, divorced women and recently wed ones were eliminated, leaving only 770 of the thousand to be reckoned with.

Considering the fashion angle of discontent, perhaps that 365 is a goodly representation of contended wives although on the face of the report it looks slightly overshadowed by the other group. Possibly because a medical body was doing the analyzing, strong emphasis was put on the sex side of life as a feature of maritial discontent. "Some shock in childhood related to the sex side of life" was listed among the leading discontent breeders. Complaints about relatives, money, work, management of children and the home were usually secondary.

Far be it from me to suggest that the medical men do not know their stuff. Nor that they are not familiar with phases of domestic life from which the layman is excluded. But what one wonders is why the generation from whom sex facts have not been withheld, the group, let's say, that has known no taboos of fear, are so largely represented in divorce colonies.

About all one can do, anyway, is to make conjectures about maritial discontent as it is observed on all sides of us. And be thankful for the sake of the institution that no woman apparently wants to remain outside of, that out of 770 women 365 can still be found with no complaint to register.

PATTERNS BY CLOTILDE

[Registered U. S. Patent Office.]

WOMEN'S AND MISSES' DRESS.

A serviceable and smart type of dress for active sports or for general day wear is shown today. The long waisted bodice joins the skirt in an unusual scalloped outline, helping to narrow the effect through the hips. The chemisette yoke is inset and may be made of a contrasting color. Yellow shantung was used for the original model and the belt was of brown leather.

The pattern, 3051, comes in sizes 16 and 18 years, and 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measure. Size 38 requires 3¾ yards of 39 inch material.

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

Man Takes the Initiative.

"Dear Miss Blake: I like a boy who works in the same office and although he always says we will go out some time he never makes a definite date. What should I do?

"PUZZLED."

There isn't anything to do until he makes a definite appointment, Puzzled. I'd be inclined to discredit his sincerity.

Visit to Camp Will Aid in Decision to Send Your Child

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

If you are thinking of sending your son or daughter to camp next year, try to steal a day or two from the many things you want to do this summer and pay a visit to a good camp—preferably to the one you are considering.

There is much to be said for and against camp life for children. Unquestionably camp is just what some children need, while it is not at all the life for others. You'll hear one woman say, "I would never send my little girls to camp again," while another will say, "Camp was the making of my son," or "My daughter never had such a happy and profitable summer as she did at camp."

Nothing will help you more in making your decision than being an eye witness of a typical camp day or two. In that way you can gain some idea of their sports and games, their time schedule, their food, their companions, and their rest. You can meet the heads of the camp and the councillors.

You can see at first hand what the source of the water and milk supply is, how the sewage is taken care of, how and where water sports are conducted, and so forth.

You will want to look into the provision for nursing and medical care. This will be your opportunity to thoroughly scrutinize the camp and assure yourself of its reliability in every particular. This and talks with patrons of the camp should make a wise decision possible—a decision as to the character of the particular camp and its suitability for your boy or girl.

The subjects covered in the new series of booklets are written about directly, not in the form of reading references. They are called "How to Gain Obedience," "Have You a Shy Child?" "Helping Your Child to Be Orderly," "Make Patience Your Handmaiden," "Sidelight on Stubbornness." As each booklet requires a 1 cent stamp, please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for each one requested.

CHEVALIER TO HELP 100 LUCKY CHILDREN KEEP COOL, LAUGH

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

Weren't you delighted to hear about our second party of the summer, girls and boys? To my way of thinking an afternoon spent in the cool Balaban & Katz theater watching and listening to and enjoying that inimitable Frenchman, Maurice Chevalier, is a good recipe for an excellent time.

The picture, in case you didn't see THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE, where this delightful party was announced is "The Smiling Lieutenant," with Maurice Chevalier playing the rôle of a young officer of the guard in the gay city of Vienna and Claudette Colbert, whom every dyed in the wool movie fan knows, playing opposite him. From what I hear it's a marvelous talkie and you'll all enjoy it a great deal.

Our hero cavorts about with princes and princesses and finally marries right into the royal family, to find that life as lived by the first family of the land is not wholly free of disadvantages. His troubles begin and the business of getting over them and getting out of them makes this a first rate talkie. Of course, just the mere fact that Maurice Chevalier is the star will make every one of you eager to attend.

As usual, I shall take with me a group of one hundred boys and girls—the hundred who are most anxious to accompany me and those who would enjoy such a picture most. I want every one who'd like to be included in this party to write me a letter telling why he or she would enjoy it. If Maurice Chevalier and Claudette Colbert number among your favorite stars this shouldn't be a difficult thing to do.

The party will be held on Thursday, July 9, at the United Artists theater, and every one who wants to go should have his or her letter reach me no later than next Thursday morning, July 2.

THE CLICK OF THE GATE

By Alice Campbell

SYNOPSIS.

Vita, young daughter of Iris de Bertincourt, is kidnaped and held for ransom. Iris has been separated for years from her dissolute husband, Marcel. They are cousins and possible heirs of their tyrannical aunt, the Comtesse de Castelmaurou. Iris plannes to divorce Marcel and marry Maj. Alan Charnwood. After a long and dangerous search Charnwood and his friend, Tommy Rostetter, a journalist, find out that it was Clare's father who instigated the kidnaping, with a pair of criminals, Yetta and Pietro, the actual abductors, the motive being the monetary reward. Alan and Tommy engage in a battle of wits and fists with Marcel and his partners in crime in a deserted quarry near their hideout just as they attempt to go away with a boy known as the half witted son of the couple to prevent him from giving information detrimental to them.

INSTALLMENT LXI.

A DEADLY BATTLE.

Two shots thundered, splintering the rotten walls. Charnwood, choking with the acrid fumes, somehow managed to push the unconscious boy back under the shelf to save him from being trampled, and braced himself for the next assault.

The opponents had drawn apart. In the suffocating darkness he could not make out three motionless patches denser than the rest. Hard breathing filled the middle space. Tommy had attacked Lepin, and after a volley of kicks and punches, had driven him into the open, where the pair of them rolled in the mud. Charnwood's foot collided with a fallen revolver, but how it was he could not tell.

Now he made out the black bulk of the woman, crouched at bay against the rectangle of the window. From her attitude he knew she was watching her chance to make a bolt. Moving between her and the door, he edged nearer her, fingers tight on his weapon. Suddenly she charged him like an angry bull. He saw the dull gleam of the great knife as it trembled above his head. He ducked, struck upward with all his might, and as the parried blow upset her balance, made a lunge forward, pinioning her arms in a grip of steel.

From side to side they swayed, while the flooring cracked beneath their weight. Charnwood found himself in combat with a strength equal to his own. Was this a woman? Under layers of fat her muscles were hard as a wrestler's. Again and again the immense blade swerved close to his eyes as she writhed and squirmed in the effort to attack him.

All at once a complete change took place. Her taut muscles grew limp, she sank to her knees coughing and panting. Still she held on, but she encountered no further resistance. She seemed in the throes of an apoplectic seizure, spent, helpless. Before he could take in the situation she had collapsed at his feet, a huddled mass of flesh.

He shuddered and lay still. Only half convinced, Charnwood loosed one hand, seeking to remove the knife from her grasp, but in the very instant that his skin thickened she was on her feet, butted him violently in the stomach, and, snatching free, hurled herself through the door to plunge headlong down the distant cliff.

But the spot where Tommy and Pietro still struggled, Charnwood purposed to make hotfoot.

"Stop! I've got you covered!" he yelled.

Some yards along the rutted track she turned and made a stand. In one hand she brandished the huge knife, while the other ripped a revolver from her bosom and pointed it full at him.

The trigger clicked, but either her revolver was unloaded or it had misfired. She swore again, undaunted, and as she backed steadily from the scene shouted aloud in her own guttural language words which had the ring of command.

As though in answer a shot tore through the night, whizzing low over Charnwood's head. Before he could determine the quarter it came from, a second followed, then a third, while sharp echoes crashed back and forth across the quarry's walls. The inference now was plain. De Bertincourt, from somewhere, was firing on him, wildly, perhaps, but with deadly intent.

Crack! A fourth explosion burst on his ears, and with it rose a hideous cry. He turned just in time to see Lepin's tall body slide from Tommy's arm, and tumble, twisted with pain, into the edge of the central pool.

"Winged!" shouted Tommy, brushing the dirt from his eyes. "That's one for her. Don't lose sight of her, though, she's——Look out, you fool!"

Instinctively Charnwood dodged, and a bullet sang past exactly where his breast had been. The smoke in front showed that it was Yetta who had fired. Already she was lumbering at amazing speed over the spongy ground, her enormous body wobbling like an elephant's.

Amid a rain of shots which seemed to come from all directions, the two men raced after her, expecting every moment to be hit. However, the deep shelter of the cliffs stood them in good stead, and by the time they had overtaken their prey the attack had ceased. Charnwood grabbed the woman's left legs as she hoisted herself into the car, hauled her to earth, and fell on her with his full weight.

"Snatch her gun," he panted as she bit and scratched, using all her enormous force in the furious attempt to get free.

Tommy aimed two powerful blows across her pudgy wrists. The revolver shot into the mud, the knife following, in its curved flight grazing Charnwood's temple. Even so, she was not conquered, and the faces of both men were scarred and bleeding before they succeeded in forcing her backward.

From the car's rear seat a coil of rope protruded. This Charnwood used, to bind her round and round, knotting the ends securely behind. Then they crammed her bodily into the car.

The injured Pietro lay limp and apparently unconscious, his legs in the slimy wash. On the surface of the pool his hat floated some distance away.

"He's safe enough," muttered Tommy. "Shot through the hip. . . Come along, let's see to that poor chap inside the shanty." He started toward the open door. "Show a light here, will you?"

The next instant Charnwood cried out in bewilderment . . .

The cabin was empty. Tumbled rugs, the ether bottle, Yetta's leather coat all lay in wild confusion, but the figure they had left under the shelf was gone.

Only one thing could have happened. While they had been occupied with the woman, De Bertincourt had stolen here and carried the boy off.

"But why? Why?" Charnwood demanded.

"Never mind why anything! It's our job to find the pair of them, now, this instant, or he'll finish that business himself."

Tommy started forward, but at that moment a deep groan from the wounded man drew their attention to the front of the cabin. From where they stood they could see that Lepin had turned on his face and dragged himself a few feet out of the water, but now he lay helpless again, exhausted with the effort.

"Never mind him," counseled Tommy, after a critical survey. "I don't believe he can crawl any distance. This other matter comes first. Look here now—we'll make for that hole just opposite."

Directly facing them a narrow tunnel burrowed into the cliff, its entrance partly blocked by an enormous boulder resting in a pool. It was so heavily shadowed that only the outlines could be dimly seen, but it seemed evident that the overflow of water reached far back into the recess. Nevertheless, as it lay nearest, they set out warily, wading up to their waists, and when they were close enough Charnwood sent a shaft of illumination from the edge of the rock into the cavern behind. There was nothing there.

Suddenly a discordant cry rose on the air. Syllables in Russian followed, sharp, commanding. They looked at each other. Yetta was indulging in a useless fury, or else calling for help.

They crept cautiously upon the next hole, clambered over some obstructions, and peered into the interior, to find it as empty as the former one. The third and last opening was a mere shell.

"It's inconceivable," Tommy fumed when they had regained the island ledge beside the shanty. "He must have dumped that body into one of the pools, and climbed up to the cliff. Either he's concealed in that gully up there, waiting till we give up the search, or he's—merciful snakes! Is that the car?"

An engine starting grated on their ears. The impossible had happened—Yetta was getting the Renault under way. But how could she without assistance? Charnwood knew the knot he had tied was out of normal reach. "De Bertincourt! He's slipped round somehow and set her free. God, I think he's done it under our very noses!"—and with a howl of rage Tommy set off at top speed in the direction of the roadway.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

Last Minute Preparation.

In all the glory of my new golf outfit and my new golf clothes, a few days ago I bravely signed up at one of the public courses. After waiting about two hours our foursome was called and I stepped up to tee off for the first time.

A large crowd was watching when, to my embarrassment, I discovered that the paper was still wrapped around the handle of the clubs. While the other three waited impatiently, much to the amusement of the crowd, I "peeled" my clubs. A. S.

Take Your Sun Baths Gradually and Avoid Burning, Bleaching

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Go easy on the sun baths—until you get used to them.

Already reports are coming in on bleached hair, hair that has been bleached and after one single day's exposure to the sun's strong rays.

You can do a withering lot of damage in one day's outing if you're not careful. And I imagine that this year, with no brims to save a face ever so little, there's going to be a larger crop of skin and hair casualties than ever.

Of course, one does not want to grease herself all up for a public appearance. Nothing is more uncomfortable on a hot day than the feeling that you have some extra grease between you and the sun. Happily, the cosmetic manufacturers recognize this and they have worked out some good protective emollients that I'd recommend your looking into.

Some of these help you to a nicer tanning than you have heretofore experienced. An evener, smoother, and warmer toned tan! Or, if you are of the bread, like myself, that must go on forever only wishing you could have a good coat of Samoan tint, there are still protective lotions, so that, at least, we will not look too near kin to the fish that offers you more bones and claws than meat.

You can mix up a protective lotion of your own for light greasing with a pomade made of half cocoa butter and half cocoanut oil. It's oily, to be sure, but you can spread it on lightly and wipe off the surplus, then powder a little more heavily than usual. Powder is a protector, too.

But my chief object in bringing up the subject is to warn you that a summer season, during which the skin is left to look after itself, is more than likely to present by fall a much older picture of the girl involved. It is ageing, you know, if your skin has that weathered, leathery looking texture of a sunbitten summer and your hair has the color and luster bleached out of it.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

MARY McK.: YOU NEED A general toning up of the entire system. Get plenty of rest, sleep, proper diet, and exercise. Send along a stamped, addressed envelope for my booklet on weight gaining.

R. T.: A DRY AND SLIGHTLY scaling skin on the body is not uncommon. After the bath, massage the skin with olive oil or a good cold cream.

Smartest Beach Togs Take Oriental Slant

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS. — [Special.] — The great French Colonial exposition, now in full swing, has set its seal on all the Paris fashions of the moment. Annamite hats, Cambodian golf shoes, leopard skin boots, Moorish color schemes, and Algerian woolens lend a picturesque and varied aspect to smart summer resorts.

Beach clothes, like everything else, are turning oriental, and this trend is particularly suitable on the hot sands of the southern plages—Biarritz, Cannes, Juan-les-Pins, and, later on, the Lido.

The Fauvety beach ensemble, sketched today, is called palmier because of the palm leaf motifs that are impressionistically appliquéd in navy blue jersey on a white jersey background. The bayadere skirt, reminiscent of those worn by Arab dancing girls, is something absolutely new. It is widely flared from a deep draped hip yoke and it's open right up the front, being fastened by the two ends of the yoke that pull through a huge nickel ring and button with white bone buttons.

It slips off to show the white jersey swimming suit that has a palm leaf irregularly appliquéd under the front decolleté, while the sunburned back is edged with a plain navy jersey band. White bone buttons fasten it on the shoulders.

I'd have you notice, by the way, that the new swimming suits are dwindling so much above the waist that there seems to be a danger of their disappearing altogether. The idea is that this is all to the good of the health, though somewhat daring.

White straw sandals and a huge white exotic straw hat complete the above ensemble.

A FRIEND IN NEED

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

Family Desires Assistance.

"I have been out of work for months and, with a family to support, I am worried to death. We haven't been able to buy any clothes all the time I have been idle, and what we had before then is all worn out. Can you help us to get some? My wife wears size 38 and shoes size 6 or 7. I wear size 38 or 40. My girl is 14 and the boy is 13 years old. "J. S."

This man hasn't missed a day tramping over the city looking for work, but like a great many others he hasn't been able to locate anything to do. Can you relieve him of some of his worry by giving the family any clothing you are ready to dispose of?

Church Merger Wins Full Approval at Convention of 3,000

Seattle, Wash., June 28.—(AP)—Two religious groups, the Congregational and Christian churches of the United States and Canada, with a combined membership of more than a million persons, officially were united today by the adoption of a constitution, unanimously approved at a convention attended by more than 3,000 delegates.

The completion of the merger late yesterday was followed in the evening by banquets to the delegates during which the Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, New York, foretold a "revival of religion."

"The depth and sway of the revival," he said, "will decree the course that our own and the other nations of the world shall take."

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

FRANKFURT-ON-THE-MAIN, June 28.—Dr. Hans Prinzhorn, doctor of philosophy and medicine and German nerve specialist, has accepted a call by the University of Southern California, Los Angeles, to lecture on psychology during the summer of 1932.

Bright Sayings of the Children

They were busy taking weights and measures in the first grade at school. The work was not progressing as fast as little Billie thought it should, so he anxiously said to his teacher, "Well, Miss L., aren't you going to scale me today?

Food Talk

It is conceded by physiologists that fruit sugar is easily assimilated by the human system. And how delicious it is! No one who has eaten pineapple in the tropics can forget the flavor of that sun ripened fruit—one largely due to natural fruit sugar. It's a flavor that lingers in one's memory for a long time and one resolves definitely to go back to Hawaii at some future date to ride gloriously in on the surf boards to a tea at which ripe pineapple is important.

Some fruits will ripen after being picked, even in dark places, as Kipling might say "without benefit of sunshine," but this is not true of pineapple, which needs sunshine to produce its full quota of fruit sugar. Analysis by scientists has shown that there is more than 12 per cent of fruit sugar in pineapple which has ripened in the sunshine.

Pineapple which has been picked green in order to ship it from some tropical island to market contains only about 3½ per cent of fruit sugar, as the sugar content never increases after the fruit is picked. It fails to develop its full sugar content when it has to ripen in the dark holds of vessels. So, if we want an abundance of fruit sugar in the pineapple, we should choose fruit in its canned form—fruit which has ripened fully in the tropical sunshine and which contains the full quota of fruit sugar. If we prefer less sugar in this piquant fruit, then we may buy it in the fresh state.

This year there will be plenty of pineapple and at prices which any budget can afford, so the household bill of fare may include exotic tropical dishes which help make an epicurean feast of one's meal.

RASPBERRY AND PINEAPPLE SHORTCAKE.

Pat rich baking powder biscuit dough into two rounds about ¼ inch thick and put together with melted butter between. Bake as usual, split open, and again butter. Meanwhile, one pint of fresh raspberries should be allowed to stand with ½ cup sugar on them for an hour or so. Then add one No. 2 can of crushed canned pineapple and spread this mixture between and on top of the shortcake.

Yield: Six servings.

FRESH PINEAPPLE SALAD.

Select a fine, green topped, ripe pineapple, cut in two about three inches from the top and hollow it out. Julienne or dice pineapple, add equal proportions of eating apples and celery, and mix with the mayonnaise. Fill the pineapple with this mixture and trim the bottom of the pineapple flat so it can be handled. Place it in a nest of lettuce leaves, tie the top of leaves with a ribbon, and serve.

PLUMBERS ELECT BENT; WIPE OUT RACKETEER RULE

Union Names New Men in Peaceful Vote.

Racketeer control of the Chicago Journeymen Plumbers' union, Local 130, terminated at the union election last night. Virtually all the officials elected are new. Frank J. Bent, of 804 South Karlov avenue, was chosen president by a plurality of 43 votes.

The election was called one of the most peaceful in many years, and was directed by John Coefield, of Washington, D. C., president of the United Association of Plumbers and Steamfitters union, and George Masterton, international organizer of the parent group.

Little comment could be gathered from any of the union leaders, but the impression was apparent that the members of the local had given themselves a new deal, and willingly overthrown the old regime.

Called Fair Election.

"Mr. Masterton and I gave what we meant to give, a fair election," said Mr. Coefield last night. "I am sure that the old racketeer organization is cleaned out. The local is now in the hands of the new officials, virtually all of them new men."

For many years, at various periods, the union had been dominated by such men as "Skinny" Madden, Frenchy Mader, Mossy Enright, Big Tim Murphy, Dapper Dan McCarthy, and Billygoat Taglia. Last night's election threw out their old followers and installed the following:

Vice president, Dave F. Garvey; secretary-treasurer, William Quirk; recording secretary, E. C. O'Toole; business agents, Thomas Ferrier, Barney Egan, and William Curran; sergeant-at-arms, Ted Callaghan; members of the executive board, John Sexton, Tom Donovan, John Fritz, and George Treutelaer; members of the finance committee, Dan Kinsella, Ed Duffy and James Mitchell; members of the examining board, Joe Gleason, H. Donnelly, Art Ebeling, Ed Burke, E. F. Barnicle and T. Durkin.

Use Voting Machines.

Out of 2,200 members, 2,200 voted. Only those with paid up dues were eligible. Eleven voting machines purchased from the city were used. A twelfth was employed for demonstration purposes. At no time was there disorder.

The progressive group of the union seemed to have full control of the election sentiment from the start of the balloting.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Arlington Park, where fashionable turfmen from all parts of the country gather each July for a month of racing, will open its gates for the beginning of a 30 day meeting this afternoon.

Headlined by the renewal of the Arlington Inaugural handicap at 7 furlongs which, overnight, drew a field of 15 and will have a gross value of about $11,000, the program arranged for the opening is one of the most attractive ever presented in Chicago. The Springfield purse, the Onwentsia steeplechase and the Highland Park purse are other events to be run this afternoon, each one of which will easily feature a turf program anywhere in the country. Plans were made to handle an opening day crowd of upwards of 35,000.

Gallant Knight Is Favorite.

In the Inaugural, Gallant Knight, owned by the Francis S. Peabody stable, will be the favorite. Gallant Knight, which may be the favorite, and Maurice Crane's Charmarten.

Race for 2 Year Olds.

The Springfield purse is a dash at 5½ furlongs and has attracted, among others, Blakin, Prince d'Amour, Never-Sell, Outhound, and Rusty. The Highland Park purse, fashioned for older horses, at a mile and an eighth, includes Valenciennes, Calf Roper, Sunset Toddy, Dowagiac, and Galahad. There is also a 2 year old race which will engage some of the higher rated untried youngsters from various prominent stables.

Dozens of horses arrived during the week, most of the prominent stables from Washington Park and Lincoln Fields moving across town to the Arlington track. Several big shippers from New York also reported.

The Post and Paddock club will be the scene of numerous gay parties at today's opening, and so will the clubhouse enclosure. The first call to horses and saddles will be heard at the paddock.

SPEEDING AWAY FROM THE HEAT

SCOUTS OUTWIT MOSQUITOES ON FLAMBEAU TRIP

BY BOB BECKER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Park Falls, Wis., June 28.—The Chicago Boy Scouts traveling down the Flambeau river on THE TRIBUNE'S annual canoe cruise had music to lull them to sleep last night, because night brought into action swarms of humming mosquitoes. But, like veteran campers, the Scouts stretched their blankets over them and foiled the insects.

Nine stretches of white water, bowlder strewn rapids, plenty of singing "skeeters" and then a 4 a. m. shower, which drove some of the boys to shelter, put a typical finish to the first of a series of thrilling days.

Outdoor church service with a choir of song sparrows and grosbeaks, a big Sunday dinner, an opportunity to fish for wall-eyed pike and then a long portage to a new camp site below Park Falls were the highlights of a busy Sunday.

Minister Holds Service.

The Rev. F. B. Schoenfeld, pastor of the Congregational church of Park Falls, drove into our camp at 9 o'clock this morning, to conduct a short service for the boys. A log served as a pulpit and the cool shade of white trunked birch trees was the auditorium.

Immediately following the service the fishermen in the crowd took to the canoes to see if they could interest a pike or muskellunge in an artificial lure. Alfred Oldenburg, Hollister Jackson, Bob Corbett, Fred Sulssen, and Herman Bauermeister tossed lures all over the river, but only Oldenburg had the thrill of a strike. A large pike grabbed his artificial lure and waltzed away with the bait and a generous portion of his fishing line. The battle with a fish has whetted the fishing enthusiasm of the bait casters in the party and from now on reels are going to be kept busy.

Although there is a continuous round of outdoor activity for the Scouts, ranging from canoeing lessons to fishing and swimming, no boy in the party has been so occupied that he hasn't been able to master the job of eating. At noon the 19 Scouts lined up with their tin plates and weapons and made an attack on a Sunday dinner of roast beef, macaroni and cheese, stewed cornbread, jam and

Plan Public Announcement of Title Fight Soon—with Drums

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., June 28.—The train arrived in Cleveland at 3:45 p. m. and I went straight to the Hollenden, which is one of these old ball club hotels with the bar still preserved, a magnificent cherry wood piece with rolling curves, reminiscent of the era when furniture and ladies were inclined to billow.

The back bar mirror is still in place, too, and at this time of the year, back there before Volstead, there would have been a beautiful soap painting on it done by some itinerant artist who would have received 50 cents or four drinks of bar whisky for the same. This bar is one of the few old hotel bars remaining in place, but it might better have gone the way of the old Waldorf bar in New York, which was ripped out and sold to some millionaire who loved it for its association with the past and wished to give it a good home.

No strawberry sundae ever profaned the wood where Garry Herrmann and Ban Johnson opened wine at the old meetings of the national commission, but this Hollenden bar has been used as a soda fountain all these years since prohibition, with soda water sputtering and gasping in ignorant accents up through the old spigots which used to give quiet, gentlemanly Pilsener and Muenchener.

The Voice Said He Lied.

The telephone operator said the offices of the headquarters for the Schmeling-Stribling fight were upstairs in room 468, but there was no room 468 on the fourth floor, and after a long time a bell boy explained that 468 was up in the tower. I remember the tower. I had been up there for breakfast with Matt Hinkel one morning during the Republican convention several years ago.

Mr. Hinkel was a prize fight promoter and referee. When he let me into his room he was dressed in a vast pair of those rompers which chorus girls call their practice clothes, with a big, pink, jiggly fold of meat dangling over the waistband.

"I am just taking my regular morning work," Mr. Hinkel said, giving his biceps a twitch and trying to control the soft undulations of this dewlap over the belt.

"He is a liar," said a quiet voice from beneath the covers of the other twin bed. "This is all an act to impress you so that you will write something in the papers about Matt Hinkel, the well preserved man. This workout is his first one in fifteen years and he will be laid up in bed from it tomorrow."

No News at G. H. Q.

The covers then upheaved, revealing the innocent, impudent altar boy countenance of Ray Campbell, the most precocious kid I ever met in that twilight zone which exists between the prize fight business and the newspaper business. He had a writing job with one of the Cleveland papers and also, from time to time, he had a piece of this fighter and that one or a piece of a wrestler or fight club. He seemed a child, but he sometimes drank and swore with exaggerated manliness to make people think he was grown up, a reminder of Richard Davis' tough newspaper office boy, Gallagher, who scooped the town.

When Ray died a couple of years ago it turned out that he had been only sixteen or so when he started going around the country being a man among men, and that he had been helping to support his mother and his invalid father over in Philadelphia for years. On his deathbed he was a pathetic, lonely kid again, wanting his mother.

HERE'S DINNER TABLE VIEW OF W. L. STRIBLING

Chicken Tops Heavyweight Challenger's Menu.

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., June 28.—This is the narrative of a guest at the Stribling cottage on the shore of Geauga lake, 25 miles from Cleveland. At the invitation of Ma Stribling I had dinner with the family and spent the evening with the challenger for Max Schmeling's title until time for his public workout at 9 o'clock.

This signal honor, for surely it is a signal honor to dine with a pugilist in training for a world title bout, followed a little story told to Ma. This story was of a lady sitting next to me at a previous workout to whom Ma was pointed out. Her reply was: "That can't be Stribling's mother. It must be his wife."

While the lady's reply was merited, owing to the youthful appearance of W. L.'s mother, I preferred to ascribe the invitation to true southern hospitality rather than the story.

And So to the Camp.

So at 5 o'clock I treked to the cottage, in company of Jack Bell, once of the University of Illinois and now sports editor of the Miami Herald, on leave of absence during these weeks to act as publicity director of the Stribling camp. Just then W. L. drove up in his sport touring car, accompanied by a mother and daughter, family friends, from Wichita, Kas., who had been to the Bainbridge race track, about a mile distant. The boxer admitted his effort to improve the breed of thoroughbreds had not been an unqualified success. Later I learned his wagers were about like my own, of the $2 variety, with an occasional plunge to $5.

Greeting those about, W. L. next bestowed his interest on an express package, opening it with seeming disregard of the nails which might tear the hands which will be so useful to him next Friday night. With the air of an expert he inspected the rifle, sent by an admirer, contained in the package.

Shortly after 5 o'clock we sat down to dinner. On days when W. L. engages in public workouts with boxing, there are only two meals, breakfast at 11 o'clock and dinner at 5. Occasionally, after his workout, Strib takes a nourishing drink. On other days there are the usual three meals.

Keeps Unconventional Hours.

It may be mentioned here that this challenger, unconventional by working in the evening, also is unconventional in his sleeping hours. Bedtime is 11:30 to 12 o'clock, with rising hour by 9 o'clock. When I remonstrated to Pa against this violation of the early to bed theory he replied, "He fights at night, doesn't he? I don't want him sleepy at 10 o'clock when he meets Schmeling."

Seated at the table was W. L., Mrs. Wichita, Miss Wichita, Bell, a chap named Boone, who is a boyhood friend of the pugilist, from Macon, Ga., and your writer. Ma flitted hither and thither about the table, taking only sparing nibbles and explaining that when she cooked her appetite was not so good. Ma either actually cooks all food eaten at the cottage, or personally directs its preparation by two colored maids from their Georgia home. She buys all the groceries and inspects all the food.

On the table was a large platter of southern fried chicken, potatoes cut into eights, with butter sauce, delicious corn fritters, and beets, peas, and carrots, so cooked as to be appetizing, which they seldom are to this writer. There also were biscuits with a considerable whole wheat content, and iced tea, or, if the visitor preferred, iced coffee. Beside each plate was a fruit salad in which apples were prominent.

Declines Georgia Peaches.

W. L.'s helpings to himself were generous and included all the vege-

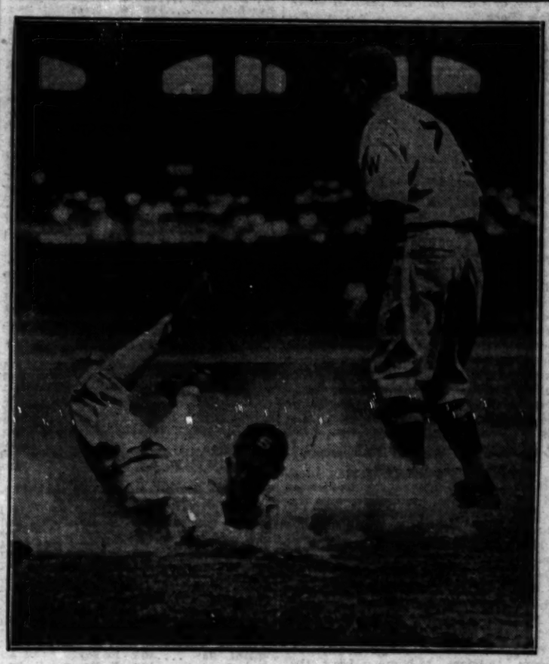
MAKING IT SAFE FOR THE SOX



Johnny Kerr bounced a triple to the hinterlands of Comiskey park in the sixth inning of yesterday's first game with the Senators, but a quick recovery made it necessary for him to "hit the dirt." On the right is Bluege, Washington's third baseman.

Thomas Holds Senators to 6 Hits, Sox Win, 2-1; Lose, 3-1

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The humble White Sox and second place Senators went back into the dead ball age yesterday to share the plunder in a double header before 20,000 sweltering patrons. Through the right armed endeavors of Tommy Thomas, who turned up with a sample of his old time pitching splendor, the south siders eked out their share of the day's glory by a score of 2 to 1 in the first game. Then they slowed down a bit in their support of Hal McKain in the afterpiece and were shaded, 3 to 1.

What Thomas did to Washington's ambitions in the prologue was done to the Sox by Lloyd [Lefty] Brown in the windup. The only difference was that Thomas survived for the full distance and Brown didn't. For six innings he prospered on an allowance of two hits. But when he yielded two more in the seventh and a tie score appeared imminent, Gen. Crowder took over the job. The Sox promptly retired for the day.

Only Six Hits Off Thomas.

Thomas' victorious effort in the first struggle was so skillful that only six hits were made off him. These were equally divided among Rice, Manush and Bluege, the last two providing the lone run which for a time made it look as if Tommy, despite his excellent labors, would be forced to take the count from Burke, the Joliet southpaw. Burke in six innings kept the Sox in check with three hits but in the seventh triples by Reynolds and Fonseca changed everything.

Until Thomas was jarred for a run in the sixth, he had experienced only a couple of mild jolts. Rice singled with one out in the opening inning. In the third singles by Rice and Manush put men on third and first with two out, but Jeffries speared Cronin's liner and ended the threat. Then Bluege singled with one out in the fourth, but he didn't get to second.

Fothergill's Pinch Hit Wins.

Manush started the solitary Washington run by a line drive down the right field line for two bases. Cissell skipped back into center to get Cronin's pop-up. West was thrown out by Kerr, moving Manush to third, whence he skipped home on Bluege's single between Jeffries and Cissell. For the remainder of the game Thomas didn't allow anybody to reach first.

As a warning to Burke, Kerr tripled to center in the sixth, but two were out and Bluege's line drive sailed straight to Manush. Then Reynolds boomed forth at the start of the seventh with a drive that was only a foot too low to clear the fence in right. The ball bounced off the bricks and wasn't retrieved until Reynolds had reached third. He went home leisurely on Fonseca's triple over West's head. Then Fatty Fothergill was summoned for the task of getting

FUMBLES COST SMITH VICTORY IN 2D BATTLE

Root Routed After 4 Hitless Innings.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Boston, Mass., June 28.—Thirty-five thousand highly excited customers saw a great show ended here this afternoon by that good old Sunday law which the Cubs know so well. It was a fine show for the Bostonians, because the Braves gave the Cubs a sound 9 to 1 thrashing in the first game and a few minutes before 6 o'clock closing time effected a 2 to 2 tie in the sundown number.

The first game is the story of Charley Root, who didn't allow a man to get to first base during the first four innings and then blew up in the fifth with a six run bang.

The second game looked like a fine 2 to 0 victory for Bob Smith, who didn't allow a man to get to second until 6 2-3 innings had been played, only to see his efforts booted into a tie in the eighth. Since the second game was more dramatic than the first, we will tell you about that sad eighth right now.

Tie Score After 2 Outs.

Sherdel got his second single with one out in the eighth, the fifth hit off Smith. Dreesen then supplied the second out with a pop to English.

Maranville, who had been very weak during the game, looked like a soft third out. But Rabbit wasn't. He socked a single to right, which Grimm was lucky to knock down to a one base hit. Sherdel stopped at second. Berger, who hadn't been able to get the ball out of the infield previously in the game, crashed a single to left, scoring Sherdel, and when the ball got past Stephenson, Maranville went to third and Berger to second. Moore was given an intentional pass.

Smith ran the count to two balls and two strikes on Neun. Then Johnny hit a nice grounder to Hornsby, but Rog kicked it and Maranville ran home with the tying marker. Berger tried to get home also, but Hornsby recovered the ball and threw to Zack Taylor to get Berger by an eyelash.

Law Ends Contest.

Smith singled with one out in the ninth, but he got no help, and the Braves were willing to get their end over in a hurry. Hornsby and Stephenson had filed to Moore in the tenth when the law stepped out on the field and stopped the contest.

The Cubs left tonight for Philadelphia, where Hornsby will try to find a pitcher who can win against the Phillies in the first of a four game series tomorrow. Maybe it will be Baecht.

In their stay here the Cubs lost three, won one and tied one. Their record in the east shows them to have won five while losing seven and tying one. All year the Cubs have won 4 games in the east, losing 13. Root's reversal today put him under the .500 mark for the first time this year. He now has seven losses to six victories. Brandt, who beat him today, rang up No. 10.

Cuyler Starts It Off.

Cuyler followed his big idea of yesterday by stepping out and getting a run right off. Ki doubled along the left field foul line, paused while English flied to Schulmerich, went to third while Maguire was throwing out Hornsby and came home when Stephenson singled past Maranville.

This run of Ki's looked like enough to win the ball game until that big fifth inning, for Root was superb in those first four innings. Aside from two drives by Berger, which extended Stevie, the Braves did not make a gesture toward reaching first.

Then Randy Moore stepped up in the fifth and caromed a single off Root's glove for the distinction of being the first Brave to reach first. Then Earl Sheely came along with a single to center and Randy dashed to third. Schulmerich tapped to Grimm and Charley chose to make the play at the plate for Moore. But his throw was too late. Moore scored, Sheely stopped at second and Schulmerich landed on first.

Spohrer and Brandt Triple.

Spohrer sent a wicked drive to right center, and when D. Taylor crossed up Cuyler on the play, the ball got through to the barrier and went for a triple, scoring Sheely and Schulmerich. Root hit Maguire with a pitched ball. Brandt followed with a triple to the left field wall, scoring Spohrer and Maguire. Malone relieved Root, and Brandt scored on Dreesen's fly to Cuyler. English threw out Maranville, but Berger singled. Then English threw out Moore to end the inning.

The Braves attacked Teachout for three runs in the eighth, the cluster being accumulated on a single by Berger, a sacrifice by Moore, a walk to Sheely and singles by Schulmerich, Maguire and Brandt.

First Three Easy.

The first three innings produced no runs for either side, even though there was a bit of hitting. English singled in the first inning, but died on second. Zack Taylor singled with one down in the second inning and Grimm walked, but Jurges hit into a double play. In the third English singled again, this time with two out, but was left on

BY BOB BECKER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Park Falls, Wis., June 28.—The Chicago Boy Scouts traveling down the Flambeau river on THE TRIBUNE'S annual canoe cruise had music to lull them to sleep last night, because night brought into action swarms of humming mosquitoes. But, like veteran campers, the Scouts stretched their blankets over them and foiled the insects.

Nine stretches of white water, bowlder strewn rapids, plenty of singing "skeeters" and then a 4 a. m. shower, which drove some of the boys to shelter, put a typical finish to the first of a series of thrilling days.

Outdoor church service with a choir of song sparrows and grosbeaks, a big Sunday dinner, an opportunity to fish for wall-eyed pike and then a long portage to a new camp site below Park Falls were the highlights of a busy Sunday.

Minister Holds Service.

The Rev. F. B. Schoenfeld, pastor of the Congregational church of Park Falls, drove into our camp at 9 o'clock this morning, to conduct a short service for the boys. A log served as a pulpit and the cool shade of white trunked birch trees was the auditorium.

Immediately following the service the fishermen in the crowd took to the canoes to see if they could interest a pike or muskellunge in an artificial lure. Alfred Oldenburg, Hollister Jackson, Bob Corbett, Fred Suissen, and Herman Bauermeister tossed lures all over the river, but only Oldenburg had the thrill of a strike. A large pike grabbed his artificial lure and waltzed away with the bait and a generous portion of his fishing line. The battle with a fish has whetted the fishing enthusiasm of the bait casters in the party and from now on reels are going to be kept busy.

Although there is a continuous round of outdoor activity for the Scouts, ranging from canoeing lessons to fishing and swimming, no boy in the party has been so occupied that he hasn't been able to master the job of eating. At noon the 19 Scouts lined up with their tin plates and weapons and made an attack on a Sunday dinner of roast beef, macaroni and cheese, stewed cornbread, jam and

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., June 28.—The train arrived in Cleveland at 3:45 p. m. and I went straight to the Hollenden, which is one of these old ball club hotels with the bar still preserved, a magnificent cherry wood piece with rolling curves, reminiscent of the era when furniture and ladies were inclined to billow.

The back bar mirror is still in place, too, and at this time of the year, back there before Volstead, there would have ben a beautiful soap painting on it done by some itinerant artist who would have received 50 cents or four drinks of bar whisky for the same. This bar is one of the few old hotel bars remaining in place, but it might better have gone the way of the old Waldorf bar in New York, which was ripped out and sold to some millionaire who loved it for its association with the past and wished to give it a good home.

No strawberry sundae ever profaned the wood where Garry Herrmann and Ban Johnson opened wine at the old meetings of the national commission, but this Hollenden bar has been used as a soda fountain all these years since prohibition, with soda water sputtering and gasping in ignorant accents up through the old spigots which used to give quiet, gentlemanly Pilsener and Muenchener.

The Voice Said He Lied.

The telephone operator said the offices of the headquarters for the Schmeling-Stribling fight were upstairs in room 468, but there was no room 468 on the fourth floor, and after a long time a bell boy explained that 468 was up in the tower. I remember the tower. I had been up there for breakfast with Matt Hinkel one morning during the Republican convention several years ago.

Mr. Hinkel was a prize fight promoter and referee. When he let me into his room he was dressed in a vast pair of those rompers which chorus girls call their practice clothes, with a big, pink, jiggly fold of meat dangling over the waistband.

"I am just taking my regular morning work," Mr. Hinkel said, giving his biceps a twitch and trying to control the soft undulations of this dewlap over the belt.

"He is a liar," said a quiet voice from beneath the covers of the other twin bed. "This is all an act to impress you so that you will write something in the papers about Matt Hinkel, the well preserved man. This workout is his first one in fifteen years and he will be laid up in bed from it tomorrow."

No News at G. H. Q.

The covers then upheaved, revealing the innocent, impudent altar boy countenance of Ray Campbell, the most precocious kid I ever met in that twilight zone which exists between the prize fight business and the newspaper business. He had a writing job with one of the Cleveland papers and also, from time to time, he had a piece of this fighter and that one or a piece of a wrestler or fight club. He seemed a child, but he sometimes drank and swore with exaggerated manliness to make people think he was grown up, a reminder of Richard Davis' tough newspaper office boy, Gallagher, who scooped the town.

When Ray died a couple of years ago it turned out that he had been only sixteen or so when he started going around the country being a man among men, and that he had been helping to support his mother and his invalid father over in Philadelphia for years. On his deathbed he was a pathetic, lonely kid again, wanting his mother.

Challenger's Menu.

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., June 28.—This is the narrative of a guest at the Stribling cottage on the shore of Geauga lake, 25 miles from Cleveland. At the invitation of Ma Stribling I had dinner with the family and spent the evening with the challenger for Max Schmeling's title until time for his public workout at 9 o'clock.

This signal honor, for surely it is a signal honor to dine with a pugilist in training for a world title bout, followed a little story told to Ma. This story was of a lady sitting next to me at a previous workout to whom Ma was pointed out. Her reply was: "That can't be Stribling's mother. It must be his wife."

While the lady's reply was merited, owing to the youthful appearance of W. L.'s mother, I preferred to ascribe the invitation to true southern hospitality rather than the story.

And So to the Camp.

So at 5 o'clock I treked to the cottage, in company of Jack Bell, once of the University of Illinois and now sports editor of the Miami Herald, on leave of absence during these weeks to act as publicity director of the Stribling camp. Just then W. L. drove up in his sport touring car, accompanied by a mother and daughter, family friends, from Wichita, Kas., who had been to the Bainbridge race track, about a mile distant. The boxer admitted his effort to improve the breed of thoroughbreds had not been an unqualified success. Later I learned his wagers were about like my own, of the $2 variety, with an occasional plunge to $5.

Greeting those about, W. L. next bestowed his interest on an express package, opening it with seeming disregard of the nails which might tear the hands which will be so useful to him next Friday night. With the air of an expert he inspected the rifle, sent by an admirer, contained in the package.

Shortly after 5 o'clock we sat down to dinner. On days when W. L. engages in public workouts with boxing, there are only two meals, breakfast at 11 o'clock and dinner at 5. Occasionally, after his workout, Strib takes a nourishing drink. On other days there are the usual three meals.

Keeps Unconventional Hours.

It may be mentioned here that this challenger, unconventional by working in the evening, also is unconventional in his sleeping hours. Bedtime is 11:30 to 12 o'clock, with rising hour by 9 o'clock. When I remonstrated to Pa against this violation of the early to bed theory he replied, "He fights at night, doesn't he? I don't want him sleepy at 10 o'clock when he meets Schmeling."

Seated at the table was W. L., Mrs. Wichita, Miss Wichita, Bell, a chap named Boone, who is a boyhood friend of the pugilist, from Macon, Ga., and your writer. Ma flitted hither and thither about the table, taking only sparing nibbles and explaining that when she cooked her appetitte was not so good. Ma either actually cooks all food eaten at the cottage, or personally directs its preparation by two colored maids from their Georgia home. She buys all the groceries and inspects all the food.

On the table was a large platter of southern fried chicken, potatoes cut into eights, with butter sauce, delicious corn fritters, and beets, peas, and carrots, so cooked as to be appetizing, which they seldom are to this writer. There also were biscuits with a considerable whole wheat content, and iced tea, or, if the visitor preferred, iced coffee. Beside each plate was a fruit salad in which apples were prominent.

Declines Georgia Peaches.

W. L.'s helpings to himself were generous and included all the vege-

Johnny Kerr bounced a triple to the hinterlands of Comiskey park in the sixth inning of yesterday's first game with the Senators, but a quick recovery made it necessary for him to "hit the dirt." On the right is Bluege, Washington's third baseman.

Thomas Holds Senators to 6 Hits, Sox Win, 2-1; Lose, 3-1

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The humble White Sox and second place Senators went back into the dead ball age yesterday to share the plunder in a double header before 20,000 sweltering patrons. Through the right armed endeavors of Tommy Thomas, who turned up with a sample of his old time pitching splendor, the south siders eked out their share of the day's glory by a score of 2 to 1 in the first game. Then they slowed down a bit in their support of Hal McKain in the afterpiece and were shaded, 3 to 1.

What Thomas did to Washington's ambitions in the prologue was done to the Sox by Lloyd [Lefty] Brown in the windup. The only difference was that Thomas survived for the full distance and Brown didn't. For six innings he prospered on an allowance of two hits. But when he yielded two more in the seventh and a tie score appeared imminent, Gen. Crowder took over the job. The Sox promptly retired for the day.

Only Six Hits Off Thomas.

Thomas' victorious effort in the first struggle was so skillful that only six hits were made off him. These were equally divided among Rice, Manush and Bluege, the last two providing the lone run which for a time made it look as if Tommy, despite his excellent labors, would be forced to take the count from Burke, the Joliet southpaw. Burke in six innings kept the Sox in check with three hits but in the seventh triples by Reynolds and Fonseca changed everything.

Until Thomas was jarred for a run in the sixth, he had experienced only a couple of mild jolts. Rice singled with one out in the opening inning. In the third singles by Rice and Manush put men on third and first with two out, but Jeffries speared Cronin's liner and ended the threat. Then Bluege singled with one out in the fourth, but he didn't get to second.

Fothergill's Pinch Hit Wins.

Manush started the solitary Washington run by a line drive down the right field line for two bases. Cissell skipped back into center to get Cronin's pop-up. West was thrown out by Kerr, moving Manush to third, whence he skipped home on Bluege's single between Jeffries and Cissell. For the remainder of the game Thomas didn't allow anybody to reach first.

As a warning to Burke, Kerr tripled to center in the sixth, but two were out and Blue's line drive sailed straight to Manush. Then Reynolds boomed forth at the start of the seventh with a drive that was only a foot too low to clear the fence in right. The ball bounced off the bricks and wasn't retrieved until Reynolds had reached third. He went home leisurely on Fonseca's triple over West's head. Then Patty Fothergill was summoned for the task of getting

AGE MAY PLAY HUDKINS FALSE IN LEVINSKY GO

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Ace Hudkins, who was fighting for the middleweight championship when King Levinsky was training in street brawls and developing the knockout punch which last year landed him fourth in the rankings in the light heavyweight division, Wednesday night will match his punches against the King at Mills' stadium.

And granting that Hudkins is not the wildcat terror which he once was, and that Levinsky does not know the a b c of boxing, the ten round bout may touch off more fireworks than Levinsky has seen since he sprang into national prominence by trouncing Leo Lomski last September.

King Still Has Punch.

Hudkins undoubtedly has had his best days in the ring. For that matter, Tommy Loughran, Jimmy Slattery, and Tuffy Griffith have proven that the King cannot box. However, Lomski, Tom Kirby, and many Chicago lads, unknown outside of their own neighborhoods, can testify that the King has a wallop. On this basis the fight Wednesday may be a slugging match worth watching.

Hudkins is expected to weigh about 168 pounds. If so, he will concede 15 pounds to his opponent. Where Griffith and Loughran had no trouble outpointing Levinsky, Hudkins may feel the pressure of age along toward the end, unless he is fortunate enough to bounce the King for the count before that time.

Neither Ever Stopped.

The possibility, of course, is that Levinsky, who set out to make a boxer out of himself when his only stock in trade was a right hand blow which would stun a mule, will continue his futile jabbing instead of fighting as nature intended he should. In that event the bout will be no better than that any pair of amateurs might put on.

Neither Hudkins nor Levinsky ever has been stopped, which is only an item of information and no proof that such misfortune could not occur to either.

Jim Mullen, who matched Hudkins and Levinsky, has six five round battles in support.

Helen Hicks, Marion Lake Beat Jones and Cotton

Columbus, O., June 28.—(AP)—Bobby Jones, retired emperor of golfdom, was the chief attraction in a mixed foursome exhibition match played for the benefit of charity at the Scioto course today. He was paired with Henry Cotton of England against Miss Helen Hicks, New York, and Mrs. Marion Turpis Lake, New Orleans. Given a handicap of a stroke a hole, the women won, 3 up and 1 to play. Bobby shot a 72, par for the course.

Pass List at Arlington Cut 50 Per Cent

There won't be many people sliding through the turnstiles at Arlington Park on an "Annie Oakley." The pass list has been cut 50 per cent from last year. "We are giving away more money in purses and stakes than any other track in America and we believe this liberal policy will bring the finest turf attractions obtainable to Arlington," one prominent official of the jockey club said last night. "A large percentage of Arlington's patrons do not expect to see these contests without paying their way into the track."

Several horses in the eastern division of the Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney stable will arrive at Arlington this morning in charge of the veteran trainer, T. J. Healy. Halycon, a crack 3 year old, and Fall Apple, 2 year old star, will be in the shipment. Jockey Sonny Workman is coming along to do the riding.

tables, including potatoes, iced tea, but no biscuits. He reserved his fruit salad for dessert, declining the Georgia peaches which had been sent from the Georgia ranch of George Stallings, former baseball magnate. Presently Pa Stribling returned from a round of golf against Battling Bozo, a light heavyweight under the Stribling management. Pa showed a card of 87 and chuckled over the fact he had won 90 cents at ten cents a hole from his protégé.

Conversation was general. Purposely I refrained from mentioning the coming fight, looking at my watch to note how many minutes would elapse before the subject came up. It was not even mentioned.

The nearest approach was in discussion of future plans when W. L. remarked "after this is over"—note, he did not say "after I knock out the Dutchman," or anything like that—"I may go out to Wichita to get my plane from the factory, where it is being overhauled.

By the time dinner was over other guests had returned from the baseball game in Cleveland. Baby Stribling, 24 years old, had shown up and a second table was set in the small dining room with Ma again busying herself with their comfort.

Our bridge is on about a par with our golf and, therefore, we're no authority, but it appears that W. L. plays a good game of bridge of the common or garden variety. His bids are masculine, but seldom unsound. He played his cards well.

Mrs. Wichita and the writer were not lucky. Several times I succeeded in getting us set. Once was when the partner bid without the toppers, and we raised without normal support because of two strong suits which became victims of a cross ruff by opponents. The partner looked a bit aghast, as our hand went down and so did we, for three tricks. Anyway, the final score was 1,311 to 213 for Strib and Miss Wichita. This was as it should be, and, of course, "they held all the cards."

In the class A race for men, Bobby Thomas, national champion, nosed out De Zutter and Eddie Schroeder in a neck and neck finish. tower, Dick Dunne, who used to be the manager of the Detroit branch of the Madison Square garden firm and may still be, said there was nothing doing there. It was hot, wasn't it? Yes, it was hot. Who was going to win the fight? Well, Stribling ought to, I thought, having more experience and guile and being just as strong as Schmeling.

Purdy Takes Count.

"Well, some say one thing and some say another," Mr. Dunne observed, putting the situation rather neatly. "They are going to pick the referee Monday afternoon. Either George Blake of Los Angeles or Eddie Purdy of Chicago. He used to be in New York."

Yes, Mr. Purdy used to be in New York. A rather small man with gloomy brows and dark eyes. The last big fight Mr. Purdy refereed in New York was the one between Harry Greb and Mickey Walker, being shoved into a corner just beneath the ring post bearing the radio microphone, grunted for all the world to hear, "You're winning, Harry; don't knock me out."

"That night, Mr. Purdy twisted his right knee going between the boys and counted nine over himself before he could get up as the astonished pugilists dropped their arms and wondered what the rules prescribed in such cases. Thereafter, every time Harry Greb hit Mickey Walker or vice versa, Eddie Purdy would go down for a short count. He went most of the way on a leg that should have been cased in a concrete cast in a hospital. Mr. Purdy is a good referee, but with that leg and his small dimensions, he doesn't seem enough man to handle a couple of heavyweights in a dirty fight for the million-dollar asset of the title.

The Judges Weren't Gentlemen.

Down in room six-forty-something, Mr. Walter St. Denis, the head man of the ballyhoo department, was trying out candidates for bass drum on his band, which will start going around Cleveland and the outlying towns tomorrow on a circus wagon to notify the people that a prizefight impends. "I like the big, sweaty one over there," Mr. St. Denis said confidingly. "Man, he hits that big drum a beautiful belt. Nice back swing, nice down swing and lots of wrist in it. Ta-boom, ta-boom, ta-boom. Isn't that music?"

Some boys came in from Stribling's camp out among the roller coasters, the shoting galleries and roll-the-ball fakes of an amusement park. There had been a beauty contest out there.

"We had to give it to a brunette," said one of the judges. "Stribling and a lot of the boys were judges and we all liked blondes, but the blondes all had funny legs. Everybody calls everybody judge now, like Judge Stribling, Judge Kofoed, Judge Corum and so forth. A beauty contest judge is the only thing lower than a Kentucky Colonel."

Press Does Free Style Singing.

There are as many press headquarters as ticket offices for this fight, with typewriters and copy paper all around and the gentlemanly agents of the Western Union and Postal checking up on the chaps of our set as they arrive and bespeaking their business. It looks as though there will be more reporters here for this fight than there have been at any sport since Dempsey spanked Carpentier in Jersey City, because there is no cross road in these highly literate and intensely political midwest states, but has its daily press and hundreds of these papers can afford to send the sport editor or the principal advertiser to Cleveland as accredited correspondent for the fight which never sent agents to New York, Chicago or Philadelphia.

There is great indignation at Schmeling's camp, 90 miles from here, because one of the neighbors telephoned the law to come over and investigate some all night, free style singing in the press headquarters. The gallant officers suspected, of all things, that stimulants were fluent there, but to the honor or the resourcefulness of the Fourth Estate, it may be said that they found no evidence.

Pass List at Arlington Cut 50 Per Cent

There won't be many people sliding through the turnstiles at Arlington Park on an "Annie Oakley." The pass list has been cut 50 per cent from last year. "We are giving away more money in purses and stakes than any other track in America and we believe this liberal policy will bring the finest turf attractions obtainable to Arlington," one prominent official of the jockey club said last night. "A large percentage of Arlington's patrons do not expect to see these contests without paying their way into the track."

Several horses in the eastern division of the Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney stable will arrive at Arlington this morning in charge of the veteran trainer, T. J. Healy. Halycon, a crack 3 year old, and Fall Apple, 3 year old star, will be in the shipment. Jockey Sonny Workman is coming along to do the riding.

Bub May, who trained Highball for the last American Derby run at old Washington Park, and his horses are regular commuters between Chicago and New York. May shipped his stable from New York to Washington Park. After a week at the Homewood course he loaded them on the cars and sent them back to New York. Yesterday Trainer May and his horses unloaded at Arlington.

The good 3 year old Rocky News, in the Audley farm eastern division, is to be unloaded at Arlington Park this morning. He is to be pointed for the classic. Lady Capulet, a good eastern sprinter recently acquired by the Audley farm stable, arrived from New York yesterday and was turned over to Kay Spence to train.

Spanish Play, the Latonia Derby winner, owned by Dick Morris of Chicago, will reach Arlington Park this morning. There will be no rest for another three weeks for Spanish Play, as he is going to try for the $90,000 classic prize.

It looks as if Twenty Grand is going to start in the mile and a half Dwyer stakes at Aqueduct on Saturday, as word was received at Arlington yesterday that the Kentucky Derby and Belmont stakes winner will not reach the Arlington course until a week from tomorrow.

Orphan Prince, the untried 2 year old son of Prince Pal, in Otto W. Lehmann's stable, attracted the attention of the many visitors at Arlington yesterday. "Holy smoke, if he can only run as good as he looks what a race horse I've got," said Mr. Lehmann, who is president of the Arlington Jockey club. Orphan Prince is closely related to the 3 year old star Mate.

Persons who think lightning will strike in the same place twice can play a hunch as the Arlington season opens this afternoon. Last year Outbound, owned by John Hertz, won the first race of the Arlington season. Today Mr. Herts is represented in the first race by a colt called Fairbypair.

WILMETTE.

R. D. Waller and J. C. Sanderson tied for first in the low net medal event, each carding 86—16—70. In the semi-final matches for the Inauguration trophy C. H. Reeves defeated C. W. Seanor, 3 and 2, while C. Schlundt defeated R. C. Johnson, 1 up. In the quarter final play for the grounds committee trophy M. B. Kendrick defeated H. G. Shedd, 2 up; R. B. Little defeated V. C. Ward, 1 up; A. H. Glantz defeated W. Schilling, 3 and 2; G. Niemeyer defeated G. B. Gibson, 1 up. Niemeyer defeated Glantz in the only semi-final played, 2 up. The blind bogey winners were F. H. Lucas with 80—2—87, and E. Schults with 99—10—89.

ON CHICAGO'S GOLF COURSES

THE low net foursome prize on No. 1 course at Olympia Fields yesterday was won by S. B. Johnson, W. J. Healy, J. A. Nelson and P. J. Sullivan with a combined score of 298. Mixed foursomes held the stage on No. 2 course. Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Ryan took low gross honors with an 82. First low net was taken by J. W. Fulton Jr. and June Beebe with 83—11—72, while second went to Ben Stevenson and Mrs. L. Hennes with 85—13—72. Six hundred and twenty-five played yesterday.

iced tea with fruit and cookies for dessert. As there is no limit on the amount of food for these young huskies, seconds were popular.

After yesterday's thrilling experiences, while canoeing through nine pitches of rapids, the Scouts can hardly wait until they strike more of them. Although the nine stretches of rapids negotiated yesterday are as fast and rough as any canoe cruiser would want to tackle, the boys revelled in them and not one canoe upset and no one took a ducking.

Two big rocks in one stretch of rapids played tricks with a couple of the canoes and caused the gallery no end of amusement. The boys missed their channel through the white water and were hung upon boulders, which lurk just below the surface. Once perched on these smooth rocks, the canoes refused to budge. They spun around like a merry go round.

Although the embarrassed riders were unable to move, they didn't lose their heads. With the jeers of the rest of the Scouts in their ears, they had to step out, give the canoe a shove, reverse their positions in it and then, with a spurt of furious paddling and steering, shoot down the white water and into the big pools which always are found below the rapids.

Boston, Mass., June 28.—[Special.]—This is designed as a soothing message to all loyal Cub followers who may have become alarmed at rumors indicating there has been a sight of heel kicking among those Wrigley heroes.

It does not seem necessary at this time to delve in the past.

But you who have wondered about how Manager Hornsby's recent purity crusade was received—fearing possibly that there would follow much belligerence and defiant plunging into sin—may be interested in the following log of what happened last night, Saturday night, of all nights, mind you—on the front stoop of the Cub hotel.

Officers Take up Posts.

At 8 o'clock Officers O'Leary and Schalk took their customary posts at the front entrance. At 8:05 Lewis Robert Wilson came out on the stoop and sat down by Officer O'Leary and started chatting affably about the cool weather in Boston, as contrasted with the torrid temperatures every place else in the United States.

At 8:16 Player Wilson suggested that he and Officer O'Leary stroll down to the drug store and have a soda. After wigwagging Officer Schalk to stay on the post, Officer O'Leary and Player Wilson went down to the drug store and had a soda. They returned at 8:20 and resumed talking about the weather.

At 8:37, Player Malone excused himself from the presence of Mrs. Malone and came down on the front stoop to have a chat about the weather with Officers O'Leary and Schalk and Player Wilson.

At 8:51 Player Malone invited Player Wilson to go down to the drug store for a soda and Player Wilson accepted. The two players went down to the drug store and had a soda, returning in 17 minutes.

Bigger and Better Rumors.

Everybody chatted about the weather until 10:46. Then Player Wilson's new roomie, Dr. Lotshaw, came out and told about a weiner supper he had had. After a while Dr. Lotshaw invited Officer Schalk and an another to walk down to the drug store and have a soda, and when Players Root and English appeared Dr. Lotshaw asked them to have a soda, too. It was suggested that Dr. Lotshaw should join in a coin matching tournament to determine who should pay for the sodas, and through an artifice by Player English, Dr. Lotshaw was forced to pay for the sodas after all.

The recent hubbub over the curfew has given rise to rumors that Wilson, Malone, and perhaps a few others would be packed up and sold in assorted parcels, but of course there isn't any probability of that happening, at least not this season. In the first place, the price tag on the Cubs' stars is pretty high, even though they may not be performing as capably as they should, and in the second place the Cub management couldn't dispose of them if it wanted to, for the simple reason that the rules forbid trading between clubs after June 15.

The only way the Cubs could get rid of them would be to release them outright or try to waive them out of the league to the minors. In either case it would be an economic disaster. The Cubs aren't going to throw away a few hundred thousand dollars' worth of playing talent by releasing them or letting them go at the waiver price of $7,500.

FREAK BASEBALL HAPPENINGS

by Irving Vaughan

Third base is hazardous territory for runners who are inclined to pull "boners" in the course of their journey around the circuit. It was at third where the most famous blunder of all time was pulled by the Brooklyn club—three men on the bag at the same time. It was third base which Red Faber stole while Buck Weaver was occupying it in the world series of 1917. It was at third that Lyn Lary of the Yanks quit running in a recent game and thus cost Lou Gehrig a homer.

When Lary staged his unexpected dash from third to the dugout instead of continuing to the plate, he was merely taking a leaf from the book of Frank Ellerbee's career. Ellerbee, then an infielder with the Washington club, pulled a similar trick in a game against the Sox at Chicago in 1920 and then capped it in the same game by almost falling into a trap set for him by Eddie Collins, the Sox second sacker.

The first of Ellerbee's peculiar stunts came when Eddie Gharrity, then a catcher and now a coach with the Senators, selected one of Claude [Lefty] Williams' choicest offerings and sailed it over Joe Jackson's head into the left field bleachers of Comiskey park. There were two out at the time, so Ellerbee started from first as soon as the ball was hit. Gharrity began jogging on a journey he was quite confident wouldn't end until the reached the plate.

As soon as the ball had settled in the bleachers, Umpire Bill Dinneen rolled a new ball out to the mound. Just about this time Ellerbee was rounding third. He saw the ball rolling and concluded Jackson had caught Gharrity's drive and thrown it back. He turned and started for short, which was his position. He was half way there when he noticed Williams and Schalk scrambling to get the ball tossed out by Dinneen, and concluded something was wrong. Third was the base closest to him, so he darted there and arrived just in time to collide with Gharrity who was jogging along at an easy pace. In the mixup Gharrity got in front of Ellerbee and was promptly called out for passing a runner.

Later in the game Ellerbee was on first again. Howard Shanks whacked an extra base drive down the right field line. Collins ran over back of third base and, while making motions as if about to make a catch, yelled, "I have it." Ellerbee heard this and made a dive back to first base. By that time Shanks was there. The ball was still bouncing around in the right field corner. Shanks, to avoid losing his hit, gave Ellerbee a shove and told him to get going. Then the latter realized he had been tricked. He dashed to third and Shanks was able to get two bases on the hit that was easily worth a triple.

UNCLE SAM TAKES INVENTORY OF HIS REALTY HOLDINGS

First Property Census in History of Nation.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 28.—[Special.]—The first census of the government's real estate and property holdings is now nearing completion, it became known today. Begun shortly after the war when the federal real estate board was created, this compilation of government property should be finished within the next few months, officials of the coördinating branch of the government said today. Once complete, it will be possible for the real estate board to produce figures on demand showing just how much real estate the government owns, its history, extent, location and value.

An inquiry begun a few days ago developed the surprising fact that Uncle Sam at the present time does not know how much real estate and property he owns outside the District of Columbia. While the various executive departments of the government have a record of their real estate and property holdings, few of them have an accurate knowledge as to its value. Inquiries as to the total combined extent of the government's real estate holdings, together with their approximate value, met invariably with the response that such questions cannot be answered for the simple reason that no complete single list containing a compilation of the government real estate ever has been compiled.

Paves Way for Waste.

Investigation disclosed that this failure on the part of Uncle Sam to maintain an up-to-date bookkeeping record of his real holdings has paved the way for a waste in governmental administration that has proved a constant drain on the treasury.

Without any one central coördinating agency having knowledge of the exact location, extent and character of all government real estate it has been possible for one government department to expend taxpayers' money for new property in a district where another executive branch already owned property that could have been utilized. Only a few weeks ago one government department was on the point of closing a deal for the purchase of a piece of property in a large city when it was suddenly disclosed that the government already owned surplus property within a few blocks of the site Uncle Sam was about to purchase.

More Than Billion.

Completion of an accurate and up to date survey of government property not only will make it possible to forestall waste in the purchase of new property in districts where the government has surplus real estate, but it will also make it easier for a chief executive or congress to take steps to dispose of some of the hundreds of millions of dollars worth of real estate which the government owns. One estimate put the number of parcels of property in the tens of thousands, and the total value well above a billion dollars.

Officials of the coördinating branch of the government recently asked every government department for basic data covering the history of every parcel of real estate it owned outside the District of Columbia. Each executive department was asked to produce the name, location, date of purchase, authorization for purchase, original cost and present appraised value of all buildings and land in its possession.

Survey Nears Completion.

The real estate board survey excluded all property in the public domain, all national forests, national parks, and land in the District of Columbia.

Thus far all government departments with the exception of the treasury have submitted figures to the real estate board.

AVIATORS RELAY A MESSAGE FROM PERU EXPLORERS

Grab Note from Pole of Church Ruins.

New York, June 28.—[Special.]—From the depths of the Colca valley, high in the Peruvian Andes, a message was plucked in flight from the top of a bamboo pole held aloft on top of the half hidden remains of a cathedral, relayed from a coast city by cable and arrived here today with the first authentic information regarding the lost civilization now being uncovered by the Shippee-Johnson Peruvian expedition.

Lack of landing fields in Colca valley precluded a search of the remains after their discovery with an aerial camera some time ago, and Robert Shippee, chief of the expedition, made the arduous trip through jungles on foot. When he reached the ruins Shippee signaled the flying members of the scientific group, who dived at him as he stood on the rof of the cathedral. Missing the treetops and the peak of the roof by inches, Irving Hay, pilot of the expedition's Bellanca monoplane, streaked through the valley while Johnson got out on the landing gear of the plane and snatched the message from the pole while the plane was traveling at the rate of more than eighty miles an hour.

The pilot wheeled his craft and climbed just in time to vault the edge of the valley. He then flew over the Andes mountains to the west slope, where the message was turned over to the cable company at Arequipa, some 8,000 feet above the Pacific.

Explosion and Fire Damage West Side Store and Flat

Fire that followed an explosion early this morning caused damage estimated at $1,000 to a fish market and a vacant second floor flat at 260 North Crawford avenue. Chief W. J. McKenzie of the 23d fire battalion said he had found several gasoline cans in the flat and expressed the belief that the fire was of incendiary origin. The police were seeking the owner of the store for questioning.

JOSEPH BIDWILL, OLD TIME LEADER IN POLITICS, DIES

Mr. Bidwill was born and educated in Chicago. In 1879 he entered the employ of the state grain inspection department, serving there until 1889, when he was elected to the city council from the old 9th ward. He served four terms as alderman, and in 1897 he was appointed by Gov. Tanner as a member of the railroad and warehouse commission. Four years later Gov. Yates named Mr. Bidwill chief grain inspector. Mr. Bidwill was a delegate to the national convention which nominated McKinley for President, and was also for many years a member of the Republican state central committee of Cook county.

Surviving Mr. Bidwill are three children, Charles W., Arthur J., and Loretta, and a sister, Mrs. Nellie Morrisson. Funeral services will be held at 9:30 a. m. Wednesday at St. Catharine of Sienna church, Oak Park. Burial will be in Calvary.

BODY OF "RIDE" VICTIM IS FOUND ALONG ROADSIDE

The bullet riddled body of a man, later identified as that of Frank Scavo, 26 years old, 1301 Taylor street, was found yesterday in a driveway leading to the farm home of Alfred Hosman, on 87th street three miles southeast of Willow Springs.

Joseph Grotz, a farmer living nearby, reported that he had heard shots fired about 1 a. m. yesterday. Circumstantial evidence indicated that Scavo had been killed on the road and his body carried back into the driveway. There were marks of tires showing that an automobile had been turned around at the spot. One of the wheels passed over Scavo's body.

The identification was made last evening at the county morgue by two women and a man. They announced that they were cousins of Scavo. The man slain had no police record.

JOHN B. SCANLAN, CHICAGO PASTOR, TAKEN BY DEATH

The Rev. John B. Scanlan, pastor of Our Lady of Solace Roman Catholic church, 62d and Sangamon streets, died last night at the parish house, 6214 South Sangamon street.

Father Scanlan was born in County Clare, Ireland, and was 57 years old. He was educated at Niagara university, Niagara, N. Y., and was ordained a priest in 1898. He served as assistant to the late Bishop Muldoon at St. Charles church and later was made pastor of St. Dorothy's church, where he built a church and school.

In 1924 Father Scanlan became pastor of Our Lady of Solace church. There he built the convent and parochial residence. Surviving him are a brother, the Rev. James M. Scanlan, pastor of Our Lady of Lourdes church, and three sisters, Catherine, Mrs. Martha Flanley, and Mrs. Thomas Dolan.

ENDS LIFE BY GAS.

Leon H. Day, 65 years old, a retired salesman, committed suicide yesterday by turning on the gas jet in his room at 2256 Warren boulevard. Police are seeking Mrs. Jessie R. Hildebrandt, 209 Craft road, Glen Ellyn, a relative.

FUNERAL RITES FOR CHAS. READ TODAY; HELPED BUILD CITY

Charles Read, 83 years old, who as a young journeyman carpenter fresh from England helped to rebuild Chicago after the great fire, will be buried today following funeral services at 2 o'clock at his home, 155 North Ridgeland avenue, Oak Park. He died there Saturday.

CHARLES READ.

From a carpenter Mr. Read rose to establish his own contracting business, which specialized in the repair of fire losses to buildings. Later he founded the firm of Charles Read & Sons, fire insurance adjusters, and through that connection was well known in insurance circles in Chicago.

He was born in Hitchin, England. Three children, W. L. Read, 449 Jackson avenue, River Forest; C. F. Read, 1220 Ashland avenue, River Forest, and Mrs. J. W. Van Deraslice, 155 North Ridgeland avenue, Oak Park, survive.

MRS. BULLOCK, OIL OFFICIAL'S WIFE, SUCCUMBS

Mrs. Cora Wells Bullock, wife of Edward J. Bullock, vice president of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, died yesterday at her home, 540 Linden avenue, Oak Park. She had been ill for a long time, but her death, it was said, was hastened by the intense heat.

Mrs. Bullock, who was 57 years old, was a native of Portage, Wis. She was married to Mr. Bullock twenty-seven years ago. A son and three daughters, beside her husband, survive.

Funeral services are to be held at the First Congregational church of Oak Park tomorrow at 3 p. m. Burial will be in Forest Home cemetery.

Balch had gone there to visit friends. He had a weak heart, and police advanced the theory that, oppressed by the heat, he stepped to the fire escape for air, fainted, and fell to his death.

EXPECT HOOVER STAND TO STOP WHEAT ANXIETY

May Clarify Policy of Farm Board.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Farmers, speculators and others who have demanded a more positive and clearer statement from the farm board as to the handling of its 200,000,000 bu of old wheat, are in a fair way of getting it, although most speculators have taken previous statements that the wheat would not be sold abroad in a way to disturb domestic markets.

A bid message from Washington on Saturday said, "President Hoover has suggested to the farm board that he might it wise for it to consider a new definite policy in respect to sales of the wheat holdings of the Stabilization corporation. It was said at the White House that the suggestion had been made in view of the unusual conditions growing out of the depression, although the President has no authority in determining the policies of the board. The board is considering the matter."

This statement, it is believed by traders, will set at rest any uneasiness that the trade has had. However, it is thought that so long as the government has any wheat on hand, the trade will not feel comfortable.

Between the bullish sentiment created by President Hoover's foreign debt settlement plan which was responsible for an advance of $10.00 a bale in cotton and an unexpected upturn in the stock market on one hand and the heavy marketings of wheat in the southwest with a steadily enlarged hedging pressure, wheat traders had a most interesting week.

Harvest on in Southwest.

Harvesting of winter wheat has advanced into Nebraska, and farmers in the southwest have rushed their grain to market at an unusual rate. Chicago alone had 1,533 cars last week, with the run at Kansas City and interior Kansas points was unusually large. This resulted in a largely increased selling pressure by cash interests and speculators which more than satisfied traders who believed that conditions had changed and that wheat prices were headed upward, and made sharply fluctuating markets with a higher range.

The close although not at the top was at net gains of ⅛@1½c over a week ago, with June wheat in Chicago at July 57⅝@57¾c, September 59⅝@60⅛, December 62⅞@63¾c.

Good rains in the American and Canadian spring wheat section modified bullish trade sentiment by arresting crop damage in many sections for the present, but more moisture is needed and the impression prevails that there will be the shortest spring wheat crop in the American and Canadian northwest in recent years.

Receipts Below Last Week.

Primary receipts of 5,625,000 bu for the week were about 900,000 bu less than the previous week and 1,500,000 bu more than last year. Primary receipts for the season since July 1, 1930, are 481,934,000 bu compared with 457,934,000 bu a year ago.

The government is credited with being a heavy seller of July wheat in northwestern markets and Chicago.

It is said to be wheat taken in exchange for May from cash handlers who did not want to lose control of it a month ago but are now wanting to dispose of it. The farm board has sold more than 30,000,000 bu of the 35,000,000 bu that it recently announced would be sold. There is the best authority for this statement. Private reports say that government wheat has been sold on the north Pacific coast for export at around 40@45c. This is denied, by a farm board official who says that none of it has been sold below 50c.

Large deliveries of cash wheat in Chicago on track are expected to be made during the next few days, followed by small deliveries in store on the three following days.

NEW YORK LOCAL TRANSPORTATION DECLINED IN '30

Thirty Million Fewer Passengers Carried.

New York, June 28.—[Special.]—Transportation facilities in New York city lost 30,700,000 passengers during the calendar year of 1930 compared with 1929, the transit commission reported today. The commission blamed the general economic depression for the decrease in the number of passengers carried.

The rapid transit lines, the Interborough, B. M. T., and Manhattan elevated lines, gained 13,700,000, the smallest increase in many years. The fact that business conditions were worse in the last six months of the year was shown by figures for that period, when even the rapid transit lines carried 16,500,000 fewer persons than they did during the same period of 1929. The increase for the first six months of the year was 30,200,000 as these lines.

At Wall St. Station.

The greatest loss in passenger traffic occurred at the two Wall street stations of the Interborough lines where, for the last six months of the year, public patronage declined to the extent of 7,800 nickels per day for the two stations. The Broadway and Wall street stations lost 215,000 fares and the Grand Central station of the Interborough, but the increase of the combined B. M. T. and Interborough lines at Times square came a close second.

Natural Gas Output in 3 States Shows Big Gain

Output of natural gas in the three largest producing states, Texas, Oklahoma, and California, has increased approximately four times since 1920, while the number of users has multiplied more than six times, the Appalachian Gas corporation reports. Production of the three states in 1930 was 1,015,000,000,000 cubic feet, compared with 256,000,000 cubic feet in 1920.

SHARP UPTURN IN COMMODITIES FOLLOWS PLAN

Hoover's Moratorium Is Boon to Prices.

provided President Hoover's announcement of his plan for a moratorium on war debts, the largest gains followed the publication of the plan. Virtually all groups of commodities participated in the rise, but the most emphatic advances were scored by farm and food products and nonferrous metals.

The extent of the advance is shown by the Annalist weekly index of commodity prices, which rose 1.1 points to 101.8 on Tuesday. The price level of 1913 is at 100 in the index. This level was almost touched on June 9, when the index was at 100.5, the low-level of the year. During the following week the index advanced .2, and last week's gain brought the total recovery from the low level of 1931. Since Tuesday the index has recorded further sharp gain.

Report Buying Withheld.

According to bankers and commodity brokers, buying of materials had been withheld until signs appeared of a turn in the downward course of prices. The move toward a moratorium was interpreted as such a development by consumers in this country at large, and heavy orders were placed for all kinds of materials, according to commodity brokers. Some of these purchases were of a speculative nature, it was said, but by far the larger part represented buying for consumption.

Commodity experts have declared for many months that the major part of the decline in materials during the last two years, has been "overconsumption." Despite the fact that prices of many materials had fallen below the cost of production, buying remained inadequate and stocks of materials continued to accumulate. With the restoration of normal consuming power abroad, as a result of war debt agreement, the commodity experts believe that prices of materials will return to a level at which producers can once again make a profit.

An illustration of the manner in which consuming power was unlocked by the announcement of a general moratorium was presented by the copper market. For several weeks it was been known that foreign users of copper were underbought and were postponing commitments until the metal market showed signs of firmer prices. The apathy of foreign and domestic buyers, coupled with the accumulation of unsold stocks of copper, led to a decline in the price of the metal this year from 10c to 7¾c a pound, an historic low record.

Buying Expands.

With the announcement of the debt plan foreign buying increased tremendously and during the last week has been running between 10,000,000 and 20,000,000 lbs a day and the demand has sent the price to 9.025c a lb. Copper authorities have estimated that sales for June are likely to total 300,000,000 lbs. Stocks of refined copper in North and South America on June 1 totaled approximately 797,334,000 lbs, so that sales for the month will be less than a third of stocks of the metal. Little of the copper sold, however, has been for immediate delivery, so that stocks of copper at the end of June are apt to show another increase, according to producers of the metal.

Lead Market Activity.

A similar sharp increase in buying occurred in the lead market. As a result there were four successive increases in the price of the metal which advanced the price from 3.75 to 4.40 in four days.

Sensational advances have also occurred in the cotton and wheat markets, and a long list of other materials has rallied from the low levels of the year. Commodity experts agree that the attitude of buyers has changed materially during the last week, and that further improvement in sales and the problem of "underconsumption." The experts believe, however, that much remains to be done in solving the problem of overproduction of certain materials, such as copper and rubber. Until production is reduced, the experts declare, surplus stocks of commodities are apt to be unwieldy.

Low Cost of Living.

The cost of living for the average city worker is now lower than at any time in the last twelve years and it is still going down, according to a report soon to be published by the National industrial conference board. The report deals with the subject for the period between 1914 and 1931.

An advance summary of the report shows that in 1930, as a whole, the cost of living averaged 3.8 per cent lower than in 1929 and 4.2 per cent lower than in 1928. At the end of 1930 the index was at the lowest point recorded during the last 13 years, the index in December, 1930, being at exactly the same point as in June, 1918. In April, 1931, the downward trend was still apparent, the index being 4.8 per cent lower than in December, 1930, and 11.8 per cent lower than in 1929, the newly adopted base being used for the first time in the conference board in preparing its report.

Makes Comparison.

The important fact is brought out that the decline in the cost of living since the beginning of the present period of depression is not as great as many persons have probably been led to believe because of the sensational price reductions in many lines of merchandise. The present decline has not been as sharp as the one during the depression that began in 1920, the report shows. It points out that there was a decline of 8.3 per cent in the 14 months following the 1920 market upheaval in October, as compared with a decline of 3.8 per cent for the 14 months beginning with the turn of events in 1929.

A partial explanation of this difference, the report points out, is to be found in the fact that 1920 prices were greatly inflated, as compared with the more stable prices of 1929.

BULLISH SPIRIT IN MARKETS OF WORLD AIDS GOTHAM CURB

New York, June 28.—(AP)—The bullish spirit prevailing on world security markets as a result of the international debt moratorium proposals has pulled curb prices far above the levels prevailing three weeks ago and given renewed courage to professional and private traders.

The quotations attained at the close of last week's rally bore faint resemblance to the depressed values of early this month. Volume picked up enormously both in the share and bond divisions of the market and it was evident that the floating supply of most securities was extremely limited. This situation was of course most apparent in the erratic specialties, which had wide moves.

A striking recovery in the oils was one of the week's outstanding changes, but utilities advanced with almost equal vigor. Electric Bond and Share ran up more than 6 points, to above 45, contrasting with its 1931 low of 31¾. American Gas and Electric was up nearly a dozen points. Stocks with a foreign background, such as Brazilian Traction and American and Foreign Power warrants, were particularly helped by the feeling of optimism engendered by the debt move.

The rally gave the mining shares a strong lift. Newmont, United Verde, Roan Antelope, New Jersey Zinc, Bunker Hill, and others ran up easily as metal prices firmed. Among the oils, Gulf climbed rapidly, accompanied by Humble and Vacuum. Among the more familiar specialties and industrials, there was pronounced strength to the Ford issues, Woolworth, Ltd., Aluminum of America, New York Steam, and Great Atlantic and Pacific. Many investment trusts also took heart from the increase in the value of their portfolios.

PRODUCTION OF STEEL INGOTS SLOWLY RECEDES

New York, June 28.—(AP)—The trend of steel ingot production continued slowly downward in the last week, reflecting smaller orders for finished products. While President Hoover's moratorium proposals created a more hopeful feeling, they failed to stimulate improved demand.

Output is now estimated at 36 per cent of capacity and predictions are heard in the trade of further possible shutdowns. Although buying of certain lines tapered off further, an encouraging feature was improved demand for line pipes, while awards made and pending on structural steel have increased. The price situation is not clearly defined, with advances for the third quarter announced in some lines, and other lists pending. Pig iron is still quiet and steady.

Copper advanced sharply on active foreign and domestic demand stimulated by favorable reaction to moratorium proposals and strength of the London market. Gains for the week amounted to ¾ of a cent per pound, with producers restricting sales at the new quotation of 8¾ cents for electrolytic, delivered, Connecticut valley. Sales thus far this month here and abroad total more than 130,000 tons.

State, Municipal Bond Issues to Total $14,011,221

New York, June 28.—(AP)—After three weeks of comparatively heavy bond offerings by states and municipalities, the Bond Buyer reports, new financing in that class scheduled this week shows a total of $14,011,221, compared with $43,507,859 last week. The weekly average for the year to date is scheduled this week are $5,000,000 South Carolina 16 year highway certificates of indebtedness on Wednesday; $2,096,500 Montana Institution bonds on the same day, and $1,000,000 Jackson county, Mo., road and bridge bonds Tuesday.

Appointment of Louis F. Swift, chairman of the board of Swift & Co., meat packers, as a member of a special committee to arrange an industrial tour for Latin American delegates to the fourth Pan-American commercial conference in October has been announced by L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American union. The tour is intended to develop closer commercial relations between the United States and the Latin American nations.

Weekly Board of Trade Stocks

A broad active trade last week carried prices higher on Board of Trade stocks, and the close was at practically the best prices, the largest net gain being in Electric Bond and Share, up 7⅞ points at the close at 45⅝. Standard of Indiana closed with a net advance of 2¾ at 27⅞. Other advances were fractional.
